Fighting at 15 Below Why Argue With Us? Sunshine, Outside, Inside A New Little Tunney

By Arthur Brisbane

BE GLAD that you are not in the Japanese or Chinese army fighting in northern Manchuria, where Japan has just captured Tsitsihar, the Manchurian capital.

War is bad enough at best, but war with a temperature of 15 degrees below zero is difficult to imagine. The Japanese and Chinese have been fighting within the zone of Russian influence and that may start more news of an unpleasant kind, unless Russia is very wise.

When the League of Nations council met privately yesterday, Japanese and Chinese delegates were absent. China attached great hopes to action by the League, but realizes now that the only League action will be conversation.

And, more discouraging, the Japanese appear to have demonstrated to the Chinese Gen. Mah that Japanese supremacy in Asia is real.

You will be pleased to learn from the Japanese Gen. Honjo that the advance in which he has taken the Manchurian capital was made purely "from the standpoint of self-protection."

Grandi, Italy's foreign minister, has begun his "conversations" with President Hoover.

The President must begin to feel about conversations as the lady of Shalott felt about shadows. She was getting tired of them.

Where can men begin when they take up "world problems?" Do they begin with Italy's fear of France, or French suspicions of Italy? Do they go to the East, and begin worrying about Japan, China, Russia?

Or might they, for a great and unusual change, discuss matters that interest the United States?

Grandi emphasizes especially the importance of reducing armaments and cutting down expense in keeping ready for war.

That should be done. But why do Europeans come to talk to us about it? Why do they not arrange those matters in Europe, where wars are planned and start?

Europe started the last war, and will start the next among white people. Why must we be dragged in?

John D. Rockefeller, arriving in Florida's sunshine, which is "his cure" every year, meets an Associated Press reporter cheerfully, and asked how he feels, replies: "Read that," handing the reporter a poem beginning:

"We'll sing of the better things, my friend.
And we'll think of the better ways
We'll trust tomorrow to heal our sorrow
As beauty has healed today's."

Mr. Rockefeller, well and strong at 82 years of age, plays a sure game of golf, never missing his ball, always making his short drives in a straight line, owes his health partly to Florida sunshine, partly to his own interior sunshine.

Mr. and Mrs. James Joseph Tunney announce the arrival of a son, their first child.

Mr. Tunney, as you know, was heavyweight champion of the world until he got about two million dollars, "enough to guarantee economic security," as he called it, and retired from pugilism to attend to things more interesting and important.

Eugenists will watch with interest the career of the new Tunney. He ought to be a useful American citizen, having the greatest of all possessions, a very good and intelligent mother.

Prof. W. F. Reid, British scientist, who invented smokeless powder, among other things, is dead at 81. He died alone and hungry, having lived on bread and water for several months.

"When he is forsaken, withered and shaken,
What can an old man do but die?"

Rabbit raisers, thousands of them in the suburbs of Los Angeles, hundreds of thousands elsewhere, propose to make canned "chicken a la king" of rabbit meat to increase income from rabbit fur.

The United States food administration says a cold warning: "It is IMPOSSIBLE to make canned chicken a la king from rabbit meat."

Any good French cook will make chicken a la king out of rabbit meat with the greatest of ease and make it better than an average cook could make it of chicken.

A packing house for rabbits, properly managed, should be profitable and useful. The big "General Foods" and "Stand-

RACE TIME IN EFFORT TO HOLD PSYCHIC

Cregg and Griffin Go by Air to Chicago on Journey to Bring Him Back

1—Long Beach, Cal., reported that failure of Massachusetts authorities to send papers resulted in a continuance of a hearing on a fugitive complaint until today.

2—Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg of Essex County and State Detective Richard J. Griffin, who said necessary papers were forwarded last week, today announced their departure for California, flying to Chicago on the first leg of the trip.

3—Duplicate papers rushed to California by air mail by Essex County authorities.

4—Griffin reported telephone conversation with Long Beach, Cal., this morning, in which he was assured Hood would be held.

5—Confusing exchange of telegrams resulted in personal request by Atty.-Gen. Warner that Hood be held until arrival of Massachusetts officials.

6—Revival of reports that two public officials were paid $2500 each by parties interested in Hood's freedom.

Spurred by reports that Hood, charged with swindling local women of thousands of dollars

BABY KILLINGS PROBED HERE

Boston and Lynn police joined New Hampshire authorities today in investigating the murder of two infants at Alton, N. H., whose alleged father is charged with strangling them and burying their bodies, and whose mother is said to have died in Massachusetts under mysterious circumstances last week.

Police said the man admitted the double strangulation.

Pratt was to be arraigned in Laconia, N. H., on a first degree murder charge, this afternoon, following his arrest at his farm near Alton and discovery of the newborn babies' bodies buried in the woodlot of a neighbor, Harvey Forsythe.

Forsyth's wife, who, as Mary Graham, lived at Pratt's farmhouse as housekeeper at the time of the murders about a year ago, is reported to have died in a hospital either in Lynn or this city Saturday. New Hampshire authorities have requested police of the two cities to investigate the circumstances of her death.

CURLEY FLAYS GAS TAX CUT

Prejudice of the State Board of Tax Appeals in favor of the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. and other large corporations and wealthy individuals was charged today by Mayor Curley in a statement commenting on the Board's recent order directing a rebate by the City of $107,000 taxes to the company.

The order followed reduction by the board of the assessment on the personal property of the company from $24,500,000 to $21,000,000.

"An examination of the decision in this case clearly indicates a struggle on the part of the Board to make its finding in favor of the gas company," the Mayor stated.

"It is a further indication of the catering by this board to wealth at the expense of the small-home owner.

"The absurd conclusion of this board that the fair cash value of these underground mains, pipes, etc., as determined by the board, meets the test of marked conditions, is absurd and unwarranted."

Mrs. Ridley, D. A. R. Official, Killed

Flemington, N. J., Nov. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Jane Ridley, State chairman of the national old trials committee of the D. A. R., was burned to death today when her car skidded into a bridge abutment and burst into flames. Two others were injured.

Ambassador Hirota, at Moscow, was instructed to inform Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, that the arrival of any Soviet forces in Manchuria would create a serious situation and would likely result in serious consequences."

The note was sent by Foreign Minister Shidehara in reply to one from Litvinoff, pointing out that the Japanese military advance to Tsitsihar might interfere with Russian interests.

CITES 1929 NEUTRALITY

Shidehara assured Litvinoff the Japanese would avoid any conflict with Russian interests, and denied that the Japanese were responsible for rumors that Gen. Mah Chan-Shan, defeated commander of the Heilungkiang army, had obtained assistance from Russia.

COBB MURDER JURY SHOWN WEAPON

Gun That Ended the Mansfield Man's Life Introduced as Grim Evidence

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE
(Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent)

New Bedford, Nov. 19—The shotgun that ended the romance of Justin and Emily Cobb—and the life of Justin—was exhibited for two hours today to the grand jury which, in effect, will determine whether the case is murder or suicide.

Into the juryroom with it went the man reputed to know more about firearms than anyone in the state—Capt. Charles A. Van Ambergh of the state police.

The extraordinary proceedings to determine whether Emily Roberts Cobb, 28, beautiful mother of two children, must stand trial for the murder of her husband, son of a Mansfield bank president, drew towards their close.

Entering the third day of its deliberations, the jury had heard this morning the testimony of Susan Grebenstein, middle-aged Mansfield schoolma'am and landlady of the house where the Cobbs relinquished domestic happiness in the pursuit of prohibition gin.

HEARD THE SHOT

She heard the roar of the gun that ended life and strife in the Cobb household.

Finding tragedy, she witnessed its dramatic aftermath—Cobb's dying accusation that his wife had shot him.

Called by Dist. Atty. William C. Crowley, she testified for an hour, and at the end was obviously affected.

Capt. Van Ambergh then was called, and the 12-gauge automatic gun that sent its death charge of bird shot into Cobb's face last Thursday night was carried before the jurors.

UP TO JURY

It remained for the jury to determine, in the light of Cobb's brink-of-the-grave accusation and his wife's claim that he killed himself, the significance of the gun's broken stock and of the print of a finger and th epalm of a hand found upon it.

No official confirmation was to

THANKS HOOVER AND U. S. FOR RECEPTION

Authorizes Minister to Tell the President America and Italy See "Eye to Eye"

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—Foreign Minister Grandi was enabled to tell President Hoover today that Italy and the United States see eye to eye on the world topics they have reviewed.

The authority came directly from Premier Mussolini in Rome. Over the transatlantic telephone he relayed his conviction the Hoover-Grandi talks would "go a long ways towards increasing the harmony of Italian-American relations."

The premier based his expression on several reports his foreign minister has given him by cable and telephone.

IL DUCE THANKS U. S.

When Signor Grandi failed at first to reach his "Chief," because he was out of touch by telephone, he left word of the call and the Premier called him back from his office in Rome. They talked four minutes.

The Premier asked what kind of a reception the minister enjoyed, and the reply, translated, was "wonderful."

Replying to another question, Grandi said the American newspapers were treating him "very well."

CANCELS MT. VERNON TRIP

Grandi remained in his room all morning. He received the Italian ambassador and arranged to be with President Hoover and Secretary Stimson again this afternoon at the White House.

These engagements, as well as rainy weather, necessitated calling off a visit to Mt. Vernon.

Uniformed police stood guard around the minister's hotel until he departed for luncheon with Under-Secretary Castle of the State Department.

Signor and Signora Grandi will leave late tonight for New York for an official reception there tomorrow.

They will then go to Philadelphia, where the mayor will entertain them at luncheon.

At noon Saturday they will go to Baltimore as guests of dinner of the ambassador to Italy, John W. Garrett and Mrs. Garrett.

Monday they will return to New York for four days of visiting and receptions before sailing for Italy on the steamship Augustus Friday evening, November 27.

BROTHER BEATS UP CAROL IN LOVE FIGHT

(Copyright, 1931, by International News Service.)

Budapest, Nov. 19 (INS)—A blackened left eye and a swollen cheek decorated the face of King Carol II, of Rumania today, souvenirs of a fist fight with his younger brother, Prince Nicholas, over the latter's bride, the former Mme. Jana Lucia Deletj, divorcee.

The battle took place in King Carol's private apartments in the royal palace at Bucharest Saturday. Receiving by far the worst of the encounter, King Carol was forced to abandon his plan to open Parliament in state on Monday. It was announced at the time he was "suffering from a cold." In reality he was treating his battered face with liniment and wishing he were as able a boxer as his brother.

CAROL THREATENS JAIL.

Despite the fact the brothers had not been on speaking terms since Nicholas ran away with Mme. Deletj, incurring the enmity of the entire royal family, he went to the palace Saturday to demand that the king keep a promise made 18 months ago that he would sanction the marriage.

Carol, according to reliable information, flatly refused, declaring he had no desire to make a family scandal worse by giving sanction to the morganatic alliance.

Nicholas told the King he would not attend the opening of Parliament, and announced his intention of quitting Rumania, bag and baggage, with his bride and living abroad on the income from the $500,000 which Mme. Deletj owns.

GUARDS SAVE KING

Carol threatened to place Nicholas and his bride under arrest and confiscate their possessions. This was too much for Nicholas. The young prince, a splendidly developed athlete and an expert boxer, swung a right uppercut to Carol's chin.

Following up his advantage before the king had a chance to retaliate, Nicholas swung a left hook to Carol's face which left a jagged cut well, and was maneuvering for what might have been a knockout punch when the king's guardsmen rushed into the room and separated the combatants.

Information is that Carol was saved from a terrific beating only by the timely intervention of the adjutants.

CANADA FINDS SALES TAX BIG REVENUE AID

By CHARLES J. McGUIRK
International News Service Correspondent.

Quebec, Nov. 19 (INS)—Premier La Taschereau of the Province of Quebec, and members of the Provincial Assembly, cordially received a delegation of 75 members of the United States Congress in the assembly chamber today.

Visiting Canada under auspices of William Randolph Hearst to study operations of the dominion's sales tax law, the party of Senators and Representatives was given a round of official entertainments. The party has been shown that the tax plan in Canada is a big aid to revenue.

Proceedings of the provincial assembly were halted when the group of visiting legislators entered the chamber. Members of the assembly mingled with their fellow lawmakers from the United States.

Then the distinguished visitors were escorted to one of the galleries reserved for them. From there they saw how the provincial legislature makes laws.

The city of Quebec, in conjunction with the board of trade and Kiwanis Club, gave a luncheon for the delegation at which Canadian officials and members of the American Congress delivered addresses.

Good will between Canada and the United States was the theme of the speeches. Close co-operation between the English-speaking nations to help lead the world back to normal times in business was urged.

H. G. Carroll, lieutenant-governor of the Province of Quebec, received the party at Spencerwood, his official residence.

While the visiting legislators informally discussed with public officials the Quebec operations of the sales tax, during the afternoon they divided into small groups and consulted bankers manufacturers and other business men on this form of taxation.

PLAN "SOLD" IN CANADA.

Aboard a special train of the Canadian National Railways, government owned and operated railway, the party will leave at midnight for the United States. Most of the lawmakers will go to Washington, where the train will arrive tomorrow night.

W. D. Frost, an expert on the sales tax, who was loaned to the government of Australia last year to assist in installation of the sales tax there, explained to the delegation today that Canada's experience with it had proven a success.

Canadians are "sold" on the sales tax, he said.

The 4 per cent sales tax is imposed chiefly upon manufacturers' invoices at the time of first sale of the completed article. It is paid chiefly by manufacturers. some 18,000 in the Dominion, every month on their previous month's sales.

Products of the farm and mines generally are exempted from the sales tax as are sea foods. Farm implements are exempted.

Washington, Nov. 19—That a repetition by the Democrats of Republican blunders, prior to the nominating conventions, would cause an uprising which would create a third party, is the belief of Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, of Illinois.

"It must be plain to our nation," he said in a statement through the Democratic national committee, "that the Republican rank and file would never renominate President Hoover—but they are conscious that the machinery of the administration shuts out both their views and their candidates.

"If the Democrats followed the Republican example, there would be an uprising which would create another Populist or Progressive-Bull Moose party."

be had of the report that the fingerprint had been identified as that of the victim.

But it was pointed out that, granting this, it would be without significance—that only the finding of Mrs. Cobb's prints upon the gun would carry any special significance.

Miss Margaret Davis, 18-year-old maid, who left the Cobbs' employ shortly before the shooting, and several other witnesses still waited to testify but Dist. Atty. Crossley was confident he would finish presentation of the case today.

The jury's decision will be reported to Judge Hammond if it is reached before 4 p. m. Otherwise it will not be known until tomorrow.

Unlike other grand jury proceedings, this encompasses every shred of evidence gained since the shooting a week ago tonight; it is all being given for consideration to the 20 men who will decide on the probable guilt or innocence of Mrs. Cobb, who remains a patient, under police guard, at the Duxy Hospital, Brockton.

"Whether it takes a day of a week, I want these men to have every scintilla of evidence before them that they might have the picture I have. I do this in order that justice may be properly served," the district attorney told newspapermen.

He admitted his procedure to be unusual, inasmuch as he is interrogating at great length every witness, drawing from them all they know of the mystifying shooting of the Mansfield husband.

During the noon recess between the two sessions of the grand jury, Dist. Atty. Crossley conferred for a short time with John E. Mahar, counsel for the accused wife.

Atty. Mahar admitted Mrs. Cobb claims that at one time her husband expressed doubt of his paternity of their youngest child, Justine.

"She believes he was convinced he was wrong," Mahar added. "The subject had not been mentioned within a year and Cobb indicated his mistake by becoming highly attracted to the girl, and on one occasion referred to her as 'the boss of my family'."

Asked whether there was any chance the subject had been the cause of the quarrel ending in the shooting, he replied:

"Absolutely not."

Girl Charges Hit-Run Driver Struck Her on Jaw and Fled

This is the story of a pair of socks. Which had a run in them.

The first sock was when the auto of William Coyley, Rice st., Cambridge, according to police, crashed into the machine of Berina Souter, 27, of Cedar st., Mattapan, at Columbia circle, South Boston.

The second was when, according to Miss Souter, as she demanded to see his papers, Coyley gave her a right sock on the jaw, knocked her down, and then fled.

She took the number and he was picked up in the Back Bay by Patrolman Philip Denehy. Miss Souter picked him from a line-up later at Station 12, City Point.

He is charged with leaving the scene of an accident. In court tomorrow the girl plans to apply for a warrant in connection with the other sock.

Palmer, Nov. 19 (AP)—Sentence of 11 months in jail was imposed today upon Anthony M. JILTED SUITOR KILLS 2, SELF

Dennison, O., Nov. 19 (AP)—Thomas Wheeler, 34, killed himself today not long after he had slain Mrs. Blanche Schneideer, 34, who had spurned his attentions, and her husband, Russell C. Scheideer, 35.

Wheeler's body was found lying beside his automobile in which he had eluded posses of two counties for nearly three hours after the Scheideers were shot down on a Dennison street.

Beside the body were two guns he had used—a .32 caliber revolver with which Scheideger had been felled and a shotgun which had been fired at Mrs. Scheideger.

The Scheideers' 12-year-old son, Russell, Jr., who was walking home with them from a motion picture show, said Wheeler drove up beside them, jumped out and shot Mrs. Scheideger.

As she fell, her husband sprang toward Wheeler and shouted, "Say, you," only to be instantly killed with another shot—this time from the revolver.

G. O. P. AGREES TO TAX BILL

Washington, Nov. 19 (AP)—Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader, in a conference with Representative Garner today informed the Texas Democratic leader the Republican majority in the Senate would be disposed to accept a "reasonable" tax measure framed by House Democrats.

Expressing this belief to the Texan, Watson took into consideration the fact that revenue legislation must originate in the House, and that body probably would be controlled by the Democrats, while the Republicans will have a scant majority in the Senate.

"Of course, I am taking nothing unseen," said Watson, "but I believe it to be to the best interest of the country to get the tax legislation enacted quickly. Nothing is worse than uncertainty when it affects business.

"I believe the two parties will not be far apart in their tax views and rather than delay this question over a long period I think it to the best interest to get the revenue measure enacted speedily."

Pending announcement of the administration's tax plan and the decision of the Democrats on a revenue bill, the leaders have not engaged in any specific rate-making discussion.

Increases in the income taxes and in the inheritance levy have been to the fore and some have advocated levying new excise taxes on a large number of commodities.

RUSH BY PLANE TO HOLD HOOD

FEARED HE MIGHT ESCAPE

Hastily packing bags, Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg of Essex County, where Hood is under indictment, and State Detective Richard J. Griffin left Lawrence for Boston to board an airplane for Chicago, on the way to California.

Before starting they rushed by airmail to Long Beach, Cal., duplicates of papers they claimed had been forwarded last week, on which a fugitive warrant could be obtained to hold Hood.

Their action was inspired by a train of confusing events, which for a time led officials to fear that Hood, sought throughout the world, and arrested Nov. 5 in California, might escape their clutches.

The first alarm was raised when Inspector John F. Mitchell, who retired Monday from the police department and Atty.-Gen. Warner's office to which he was assigned, received a telegram from California early today.

The telegram was reported to state that Hood would be released at 9 a. m. today because neither he nor papers had arrived for him.

Dist. Atty. Cregg, when notified of the receipt of this telegram, said:

"They will not release Hood. Last week I talked with Chief of Police J. S. Yancey of Long Beach, Cal., on the telephone and informed him I was forwarding to California extradition papers. I also sent other papers that would hold this man Hood. I am leaving Boston today with State Detective Griffin for California."

WARNER GETS BUSY

The matter was then called to the attention of Atty.-Gen. Warner at his home and he immediately sent a telegram to Chief Yancey asking him to be sure to detain Hood until Cregg got there.

The attorney-general was confused by the fact that extradition papers for Hood were not signed by Governor Ely until last Tuesday, although Essex County authorities had said papers were forwarded.

This was explained by Detective Griffin, who said the original papers were certified copies of the warrant and affidavits, sufficient to obtain a fugitive warrant against Hood in California.

Meantime Detective Griffin, at Atty.-Gen. Warner's request, telephones Chief Yancey and learned that Hood was still being held under $50,000 bail, and that he would be detained until the local officers appeared.

Child Torture Charges 'Bunch of Lies,' Say Accused Pair

ABUSE OF PASNO GIRL IS DENIED BY M'NAMARA

Couple Waive Extradition and Will Go Back to Rutland to Fight Court Action

Canton, N. Y., Nov. 19—Mr. and Mrs. William McNamara of Keene, N. H., charged with torturing Irene Pasno, 7, in a Rutland (Vt.) rooming house, waived extradition today and prepared to fight the charges against them.

"It's a bunch of lies and somebody's going to pay for it," McNamara told the Boston Evening American from a jail cell here.

McNamara, 35, a former Keene, N. H., auto salesman, denied that he and his wife abused the little girl, a foster-sister of Mrs. McNamara.

Th child is now in Keene, N. H., in care of welfare workers.

WERE IN FLORIDA

McNamara today revealed that he and his wife were in the home of Mrs. Henry Currier in Messina, a sister of Mrs. McNamara, while police were seeking them.

"My wife and I were in Jacksonville, Fla.," he said, "when we decided to take the girl with us to Rutland, where I had an offer of a job.

"My wife's mother and the girl's foster-mother, Mrs. Pasno, was down there for her health. She had a friend named Harold Batchelder with her.

"Batchelder and I had a couple of arguments about the way he treated little Irene. Then my mother-in-law got mad at me. Finally we decided Jacksonville was no place for the child and we asked my mother-in-law to let us take the child with us to Rutland.

DENIES BURNING.

"We got to Rutland and I found out I would have to wait a couple of weeks for the job to start, so we decided we'd visit Mrs. McNamara's sister, in Messina, N. Y. We planned to take Irene with us, but the landlady begged us to let her stay.

"The next thing I knew the sergeant came up to the house and arrested us."

Asked about reports of Irene that she had been burned by McNamara with cigarette or cigar butts, he replied:

"I smoke a pipe. How could anybody burn a kid, anway. My wife and I loved that youngster and we took the best conditions she was living under."

LEADERS BACK MOVE TO PURGE AIR PROGRAMS

Station to Ban Artists Who Indulge in Objectionable Jokes and Quips

Banning such songs from his station as "Ladies and Gentlemen, That's Love," "This Is the Missus," "Love for Sale," "Thank You Father" and "Minnie the Moocher," John L. Clark, program director of station WBZ, has started what he terms a "crusade against unwholesome radio gags and song lyrics."

"I don't wish to go on record as a psalm singing fanatic, but radio is descending to the burlesque show and it's about time something was done," said Clark.

Endorsing Clark's program are Mayor Curley, Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, Rabbi Harry Levi, Dr. A. Z. Conrad, Dean Gleason L. Archer and men and women prominent in religion, business and politics.

MAYOR BACKS MOVE

Mayor Curley said:

"The necessity for some form of censorship to eliminate every character of indecency from radio is self-evident. The fact that last November there were but 38 theaters operating in the United States is the best answer to those who favor injection of double-meaning jokes in radio programs."

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, nationally-known radio pastor, declared:

"I have always felt rather proud that the radio has kept itself clean in contradistinction of the movies. If there is any creeping in of things forbidden, certainly the prompt arrest cannot come too quickly."

RADIO "PURITY CODE"

Clark terms his edict a "purity code" that will keep broadcasters from using songs and quips that have "come along with the hip flask."

He announced today that anyone who sings a double-meaning song on WBZ will immediately be cut off and banned from the station. In addition, network features from New York that may employ comedians using risque jokes or improper songs will also be taken off the air insofar as WBZ is concerned.

Local music publishers have taken a stand with Clark, although many of the barred songs are distributed by them. The attitude of Boston orchestra leaders is controversial.

Mickie Alpert, Joe Rines, Lew Conrad and Sonny Weeks regard the "purity code" as too strenuous.

More than 75 conventions, reunions and large gatherings of various kinds already are scheduled to meet in Boston next year, according to announcement today by the convention bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

In addition, the bureau, reporting the co-operation it has given many similar meetings so far this year, announced that invitations have been extended to six large organizations, including Rotary International, to make Boston the home of their 1933 conventions.

Among the organizations scheduled to meet here next year are the National Association of Textile Dyers and Finishers in January, the American Physical Society in February, Daughters of the American Revolution and the grand encampment, I. O. O. F., in March, the grand lodge, Knights of Pythias, in May, and the State Pharmaceutical Association in June.

POLICE WAR ON SPECULATORS

Cambridge police today threw a net throughout the Harvard square section in an effort to nab scores of ticket speculators said to be reaping a harvest on tickets to the Harvard-Yale game at sky-high prices.

Headed by Capt. Patrick J. Kurley, chief inspectors, a squad of plainclothesmen have been placed on duty in the square to stop the speculation. Three inspectors have been extended to six large organizations, including Rotary International, to make Boston the home of their 1933 conventions.

Among the organizations scheduled to meet here next year are the National Association of Textile Dyers and Finishers in January, the American Physical Society in February, Daughters of the American Revolution and the grand encampment, I. O. O. F., in March, the grand lodge, Knights of Pythias, in May, and the State Pharmaceutical Association in June.

Complaints made to police about the prices asked by the speculators for tickets is believed to have started the drive. Several of the speculators have been warned, but in the future immediate arrests will be made, it was said today.

With tickets to the game at a premium and with a large amount of them in the hands of the speculators, the latter were reported to be harvesting large money. Sets of two tickets were reported to be selling from $25 to $75, while blocks of four were said to be on sale by the "specs" at enormous prices.

Nashua, N. H., Nov. 19 (AP)—William F. Sullivan will be re-elected mayor of Nashua for this third successive two-year term at the municipal election Dec. 8.

The possibility of Mayor Sullivan's re-election became a certainty when, midnight last night, the limit of the time set for filing candidacies, came without an opponent entering the field against him.

RAILWAYS HAVE CREDIT PLAN

Washington, Nov. 19 (AP)—The railroads of the country today asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to modify its surcharge pooling plan for saving the credit of many carriers.

Today's petition is another step in the effort of railroads to get added revenues. The commission on Oct. 20 denied a plea for a temporary blanket 15 per cent rate increase and presented an alternative unique and untried in America.

Approval was given surcharges of $3 and $6 a car on some types of freight and 1 and 2 cents per 100 pounds on others. Major farm crops were exempted. The money realized was to be pooled and needy railroads assisted in meeting interest on their bonds. December 1 was the deadline set for the roads to present machinery for handling the pool. The surcharges would be automatically removed in March 31, 1933, if not earlier.

GOLD TIDE EBBS BACK TO U. S.

Washington, Nov. 19 (AP)—An ebbing tide of gold, greatest ever experienced, has turned and is flowing strongly once more to the American shore.

Within six weeks after Great Britain's abandonment of the gold standard this country lost $750,000,000 of gold. A bulletin of the Federal Reserve Board today described it as "the largest movement of the metal during a similar period in any country at any time."

Yet the process ended quickly and a commerce department source asserted the return of the gold was well under way.

The commerce authority said the withdrawal of gold was caused by European apprehensions, partly over a misunderstanding of the proposed national credit corporation. The movement was labelled a "raid on the dollar."

Lowell Gets His $300,000 Pay Checks

The $300,000 President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard was supposed to have accumulated since 1909 through not accepting any salary vanished into air today when Robert Lamb, public relations counsel, announced that this was not true.

President Lowell draws his salary, which approximates $12,000 a year, the same as any other member of the faculty, Lamb said.

A report had been circulated that President Lowell's salary had been allowed to accumulate in the Harvard treasury, and that, counting compound interest, it amounted to $300,000.

The quandary as to what would be done with the money upon President Lowell's retirement was dispelled by Lamb's statement.

HOOVER GETS SHOALS PLAN

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 19 (AP)—Private operation of Muscle Shoals, preferably by a "corporation exclusively owned and controlled by organizers," was recommended today in the Muscle Shoals commission's report to President Hoover and the governors of Alabama and Tennessee.

The President said today he would send the report to Congress. The commission includes three members appointed by the Governor of Tennessee, three by the Governor of Alabama and three named by President Hoover to confer with them. Governor Henry H. Horton made the report public here.

The report recommended that Cove Creek dam, above Muscle Shoals on the Tennessee river, in east Tennessee, be constructed by the government.

GIANT PLANE'S HOP DELAYED

Richmond, Va., Nov. 19 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off this morning to continue his trip to Miami, interrupted by an overnight stay here. He expected to reach there tonight.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 19 (AP)—The maiden commercial voyage of the American Clipper, giant amphibian plane of the Pan American Airways, has been postponed until tomorrow.

Officials of the company were advised that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who will pilot the big aircraft on its first pay jaunt from Miami to Cristobal, Canal Zone, will arrive here too late to complete preparations for the scheduled take-off at 8:30 a. m. today.

It was explained that ten test take-offs and landings were required for the amphibian before the actual commercial trip was started.

ROBOT PILOTS AIR LINER ON TEST FLIGHT

Young Sperry Says the "Flying Bombs" Will Decide Victory in Next War

New York, Nov. 19—An air liner with a robot for a pilot was processing steadily southward today, carrying newspapermen.

The flight officially placed the Sperry automatic pilot in service of the larger planes of eastern air transport. The robot supplements the work of the human pilot, taking over guidance of the plane whenever he wishes.

The 18-passenger plane, which left Newark this morning, was making its regular run to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Raleigh, Florence, Charleston, Savannah and Jacksonville.

While this robot-operated liner was in flight E. A. Sperry, Jr., who, with his father, has invented robot devices, described how "flying bombs" will settle the next war. In the next clash of arms big guns, he said, will play but a minor role.

"A flying bomb or aerial torpedo," Sperry said, "is the cheapest way to deliver a ton of explosives to an objective. A gun is the most expensive.

"Say you want to destroy an ammunition depot 500 miles away.

"A big gun couldn't do it, but an aerial torpedo could. You'd simply fit a cheap plane with a robot pilot and some other gadgets and load it with explosive. Then one dark night, it could take off by itself, with another plane following, controlling it by radio.

"When the flying bomb reached the depot, down it would plunge, blowing everything off the map. Then the human pilot could fly back and sit down to breakfast."

NIZAM'S 2 SONS TAKE BRIDES

Nice, France, Nov. 19 (AP)—The greatest temporal and spiritual houses in Islam were welded today with the wedding of the two sons of the Nizam of Hyderabad to the daughter and niece of the banished Caliph of Turkey.

Prince Azam Jah, eldest son of the Nizam and heir to his enormous fortune, was married in a religious ceremony to Princess Durai Shehvar, the former Caliph's daughter. The Younger son, Prince Moazzam Jah, was wedded to Nilufar Hanin Sultana, the niece. The elite of the Riviera's moslem colony attended.

The rites occupied only 10 minutes. The aged ex-caliph read two prayers before the kneeling couples and the bonds were tied.

When the marriage contracts were signed last Thursday the Nizam settled $75,000 on Princess Durai with the proviso that she would receive an additional $125,000 if she survived her husband or the marriage was annulled.

RESPIRATOR INVENTORS ARE HONORED

Awards Are Given to Professors Philip Drinker and Louis A. Shaw

Philadelphia, Nov. 19 (AP)—Two young Americans who combined science and modern invention to save human life, have been awarded for their efforts by an obscure Scottish chemist who died in 1816.

They are Professors Philip Drinker and Louis Agassiz Shaw, coinventors of the Drinker respirator, hailed as the nearest approach to the natural method of human breathing ever devised.

The two young scientists, both of whom are connected with the School of Public Health at Harvard University, were presented with the John Scott award at Franklin Institute last night.

Scott, an almost unknown chemist of Edinburgh, Scotland, left a fund with the city of Philadelphia to provide a prize each year for the invention or discovery "most conducive to the comfort, welfare and happiness of mankind."

Tall and bashful, Drinker told the distinguished gathering which witnessed the presentation of the award of his early experiments with the respirator four years ago.

The first attempt, he said, was a crude coffin-like box, into which he could entice no one and was forced to be the first "patient" himself. The pressure and suction for this first contraption were supplied by two ordinary vacuum cleaners.

Many lives have been saved by the Drinker respirator. It is used extensively in combating infantile paralysis. It has also been successful in cases of drowning, asphyxiation and electric shock.

Jealous Man Shoots Girl; Kills Himself

New York, Nov. 19 (INS)—Jealous rage led Walter Lippow, 28, to shoot Tillie Schwartz, 17, in her Brooklyn home, then kill himself by sending a bullet crashing through his head, police said today.

The girl refused Lippow's offer of marriage last week, it was reported. She was said by attendants at St. Mary's Hospital to be in a critical condition today.

SOVIET WARNED BY JAPANESE MINISTRY

perts, but believed that they originated in Chinese circles.

The note cited Japanese neutrality at the time of the Sino-Russian fighting in Manchuria in 1929, pointing out that Japan refused to permit the use of the South Manchurian railway to move Chinese troops, and asking that Russia should now pursue a similar policy in the case of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

The Japanese expeditionary force which captured Anganchi and Taitsihar completed their occupation of both cities today.

STREAM OF REFUGEES

Chinese refugees, wrapped in heavy clothing against the rigors of sub-zero weather, streamed toward the Mongolian and Siberian borders.

As remnants of Gen. Mah Chan-Shan's defeated army fled north preparations were rushed in Tsitsihar to establish an independent Chinese government, according to dispatches received here.

The Tsitsihar government, which probably will declare its independence of Nanking, will be organized under the protection of the Japanese authorities in Manchuria, functioning in the same manner as the regimes set up at Mukden and Kirin following the Japanese occupation.

GEN. MAH FAR NORTH

With the dispersing of the Heilungkiang army and the advent of a friendly Chinese regime, the Japanese will be able to exert control over practically all Manchuria.

With not more than 1000 soldiers out of the 20,000 he commanded 24 hours ago, Mah Chan-Shan was reported today near Koshan, 100 miles northeast of Taitsihar. The rest of his army was scattered over a wide area, after suffering severe casualties in the Nonni-Anganchi-Taitsihar fighting.

Official reports on the casualties were not yet available here, but it was estimated the Japanese lost approximately 200 killed and wounded before Taitsinar was occupied, and that the Chinese killed and wounded would total 3000.

Press dispatches today from Harbin said Chang Ching-Hui, a Chinese official, was going to Taitsihar at once to become head of a new independent government, but the foreign office was of the opinion that the head of the new administration would be Ting-Chao, an official of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

Dr. Wu Regards League as Futile in Crisis

Shanghai, Nov. 19 (AP)—Grave doubts that the League of Nations would be able to bring about a satisfactory solution of the Manchurian dispute between China and Japan were expressed today by Dr. C. C. Wu, former chinese minister to Washington.

"People expect too much from the league, a 15-year-old child," said Dr. Wu, who is here as representative of the Canton government.

League in Desperation Turns to Dawes for Aid

Quai d'Orsay, Paris, Nov. 19 (INS)—Its efforts to solve the Manchurian conflict shocked by Japan, the League of Nations council turned in desperation today to U. S. Ambassador Charles G. Dawes.

After a secret meeting of the council—the fourth since it convened Monday—Chairman Briand conferred with Dawes in an effort to persuade him to take a seat in the council for at least one public session, believing the League's position would be strengthened thereby.

Briand also sought to ascertain just how far the United States might go in backing the League if it invokes articles of the covenant entailing diplomatic boycott, economic sanctions or other measures of punishment provided for alleged aggressors.

The council appears to be split into two factions, moderates who advocate dispatch of neutral "observers" to Manchuria and radicals who demand immediate invocation of articles XV and XVI, which provide for boycott and sanctions.

If observers are sent, it will mean definite abandonment by the League of its original idea of fixing a date for Japanese evacuation, and virtually leave Manchuria in the hands of the Japanese for an indeterminate period.

The council today received another note from the Chinese delegate, Dr. Alfred Sze, saying the Manchurian crisis was a "life and death" issue for the league and for the 1932 disarmament conferences and repeating that China never would accept direct negotiation with Japan before troops in Manchuria are withdrawn.

Thousands in Drive to Get Funds for Gen. Mah

Shanghai, China, Nov. 19 (AP)—Thousands of Chinese students abandoned classes today and began organized solicitation for funds to assist Gen Mah Chan-Shan, commander of the Chinese forces in Manchuria.

They scattered throughout the city and into the foreign concessions carrying banners with anti-Japanese slogans and soliciting all passersby.

Reports from various other places in the Yangtze valley said efforts were under way to obtain funds to finance the purchase of supplies and ammunition for the Manchurian army.

Nanking, Nov. 19 (AP)—Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, president of the Nanking Government, announced today he was proceeding immediately to Manchuria.

Talk Not So Cheap; It Buys From Boy Part of Plane

Manchester, Ct., Nov. 19 (INS) Lieut. Carl B. Harper, airplane test pilot, traded a speech for a piece of his plane and considered that he got it cheap.

A short time ago the plane crashed near Hollister School here. In order to determine the cause of the crash Harper needed all the parts of the plane, but Edward Jarvis, a schoolboy, picked up a piece of the wing as a souvenir and was reluctant to part with it.

Harper bargained with him—he would visit Edward's school and give the boys a talk on aviation if Edward would give back the wing segment. Edward yielded and Harper gave his speech.

'BAT BABY' CASE STARTS PROBE AT CAPITAL

Washington, Nov. 19 (INS)—Reorganization and a Congressional investigation of the District of Columbia Board of Public Welfare, as an aftermath of the alleged cruelties of Henry and Elsie Riley toward their daughter Edith, was in prospect today, following the demand of Rep. Bowman (R.) of West Virginia, a member of the House district committee.

Bowman declared he had been following the developments of the investigation since the arrest of the father and the step-mother, and looked with "utter contempt" upon the Board of Welfare for not continuing its investigation after alleged unwholesome conditions in the Riley home had been brought to light six years ago.

The child, allegedly a mental deficient, now is under observation in Gallinger Hospital, while the parents are under $2500 bond each, following indictments charging cruelty. The 13-year-old girl, according to her brother, was kept a virtual prisoner in a dark closet for nearly four years, and suffered cruel treatment at the hands of her step-mother.

PINCHOT 'SLUSH FUND' CHARGED

Washington, Nov. 19 (INS)—Louis McGraw, who described himself as "a Pittsburgh labor leader," called on President Hoover and other officials of the government today in an effort to prefer charges against Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania for what McGraw considers misuse of Federal-state road funds.

His complaint against Pinchot was first aired in McGraw's publication known as The Labor World, which, he says, is backed "by the biggest businesses in the country."

He alleges the Governor has been forcing contractors to turn back part of their money into what he calls "slush funds."

Missing Winthrop Man, 81, Is Sought

A search of hospitals was begun today by Winthrop police in their hunt for Clarence H. Bissell, 81, of Temple ave., Winthrop, who disappeared from his home Tuesday night. The octogenerian was last seen standing in front of the Lynn Narrow Gauge depot.

Bissell, who has been a resident of Winthrop for 40 years, is a well-known figure in the town. His description is five feet seven inches in height, weighs 140 pounds, white hair and moustache, shoulders slightly stooped. He was wearing tortoise-shell glasses, gray mixed overcoat, and a blue-gray suit.

"SYNTHETIC LIFE" ENDS

Patient Was Kept Alive 300 Hours

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 19 (AP)—A victim of sleeping sickness for 30 days, Dr. A. J. Berresheim, 50-year-old Louisville surgeon, died here today.

Most victims of the malady die within two weeks after contracting, but Dr. Berresheim had been kept alive for the last 300 hours by regular injections into his veins of a fluid containing dextrose which served in place of food.

Associates of his attending physicians, Drs. George A. Hendon and J. J. Moren, said the method of feeding devised by Dr. Hendon, undoubtedly had prolonged life.

Dr. Hendon had termed his patient's existence during the artificial feeding "synthetic." Dr. Berresheim contracted "sleeping sickness" after having pneumonia.

COLDS

Break Up in a Jiffy

This Quick Way

Feel Like A New Man Almost Before You Know It

People have found out that new-fangled ideas and notions don't break up colds. So millions have turned back to first principles and use what they know breaks one up in a jiffy. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to trifle with.

The thing to do is to get Hill's Cascara Quinine at any drug store. Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all.

Soon you'll start to feel like a new person. Things will loosen up, your head will clear, aching go—you'll be back on the job with a wallop.

Get Hill's now. It is a scientific formula made to do one thing well: to knock a cold—not to cure a thousand ailments. Get your money back if it doesn't work, with twice the speed of anything else you've ever tried.

THE YOUNG MAIDENS WHO DISPLAYED THE charming creations in the fashion show at the Copley-Plaza yesterday afternoon and last evening simply enchanted the appreciative and admiring audience. We think that debutantes of this season are losing the vacant stare of baby days even more quickly than the group did last year. They have more poise, sweeter manners, and more sense of humor.

ISABELLA LEE

Did you know that Isabella Lee of Wellesley is a very beautiful girl—well, she IS. She looked perfectly dreamy in a peach chiffon evening gown with deeper velvet wrap to match trimmed with cocoa fox.

And who started the argument about WHICH had the loveliest figger—have you seen the little girl from the West—Miss Charlotte Rantoul. Charlotte is not really a Westerner, she has just been living in Santa Barbara, Cal., for a couple of years. Mother, Mrs. Augustus Rantoul, is too much of a New Englander to think of having daughter presented at any Court except historic Boston.

Mrs. Edward Pinkerton in Group

IT WAS WITH WRAPT AND ADMIRING ATTENTION that we viewed the young girls who acted as mannikins in the Fashion Show for the benefit of the Florence Crittenton League. One personality stood out quite distinctly from the others in spite of their grace and pulchritude—Mrs. Edward Pinkerton (Eleanor Drinkwater), whom we haven't seen since her marriage a year or so ago. She is of the tall, willowy type with marvelous bright brown eyes, dark mass of windblown hair swept back from a broad forehead, a lovely sculptored face in olive tones. In a turquoise blue pajama ensemble with tunic of wine colored velvet she was the most paintable person we have seen in—well, in some time. - Page Zuloga!

WE MET THAT VERY pretty deb, Harriet Moseley, and vote that she will be remembered after some of the others may be forgotten. You just sense there is something back of Harriet.

* * *

Dorothy Forbes

THERE IS ONE THING WE noticed, and that is that the girls are showing a lot of originality in dress and in arranging their locks. Alice Ellsworth has the most bewildering bob, very French, with tiny curls all over her pretty head. It is very chic and suits her style exactly. She wore crepe costume of chartreuse and magenta, quite Parisian.

THE BAZAAR IS CONTINUING today and this evening and we will tell you more tomorrow.

DID YOU HEAR THAT Mr. and Mrs. Sam Peabody (Augusta Converse McElwain) have returned from their wedding trip and are visiting mother, Mrs. Frederick S. Converse in Westwood? They have taken a house in Groton which is making the tabbies blink.

DEAR H. C. S. (WE ASSUME this stands for His Charming Shyness): After admiring your delightful handwriting and endeavoring to guess your age thereby—some of the Ss and Zs looked a little wavy—we are very pleased to tell your fortune by arts known only to ourselves. You are evidently a person of great curiosity and courage, a little bit gullible perhaps in regard to forecasts of business but we hope yez are right, certainly a judge of antiques and interiors and not superstitious. If you send us a small check for a thousand dollars for this, we will promise you it will not go to the unemployed. They will very likely all be employed by that time.

A COURSE OF THREE LECTURES will be given on Tuesday afternoons, Dec. 1, 8, and 15 at 2:30 o'clock in aid of the South Boston Neighborhood House. The first one will be at the home of Mrs. F. Dougles Cochrane at 257 Commonwealth ave., by Mrs. Philip Hendy, "Modern Art and the Museum." Mrs. Cochrane is the wife of the minister of King's Chapel. On the eighth, Mrs. John Carroll Perkins will speak on "Notable Gardens of Scotland," at the home of Mrs. T. Morris Murray, 21 Marlborough st., and on Dec. 15 the handsomest professor at Harvard and the youngest, Mr. Robert Hillyer, will tell you about "Modern Poetry" at Mrs. Cochrane's house. Mrs. Chilton Royal Cabot has charge of the subscriptions.

Mrs. Hearst Honored by 3000

New York, Nov. 19 (US)—The 10th anniversary of the inauguration of the Free Milk Fund for Babies was celebrated last evening by a great testimonial dinner to its founder, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, at the Hotel Commodore.

Nearly 3000 of Mrs. Hearst's friends, those who have given aid in this noteworthy work which has saved thousands of infant lives, were present. It was one of the largest functions of its kind New York has ever known.

Mayor Walker was toastmaster and Bernard F. Gimbel was chairman of the dinner committee, comprising James A. Farley, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, William Muldoon, Herbert Bayard Swope and Gene Tunney.

The dinner was sponsored by the Muldoon-Tunney championship committee and included among the diversions of the evening, the appearances of a large number of stars of the stage and screen, and several short boxing exhibitions by ring celebrities.

This part of the program was arranged by A. J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., chairman of the entertainment committee.

Mrs. Hearst, who was introduced by Mayor Walker in a speech which bespoke the community's debt to her, said:

"I am very happy to receive the honor of this testimonial banquet from the hands of so many distinguished friends.

"I am very happy also that the work of the Milk Fund has this evidence of their approval.

"I want to thank the many who have contributed so generously toward the maintenance of this charity.

"I want to thank also the boxing commission and the members of the sporting fraternity, who have been extremely liberal in their support.

"Then let me thank the people of the stage, who are always responsive to the appeal of all charities, and who have done much for us.

"Finally, let me sincerely thank you who are here tonight for the encouragement and stimulus you give me in my work."

Group to Give Play Soon

The Amateurs," that delightful group of actors and actresses in Sudbury, are opening their 25th season on Wednesday, December 2, with one of A. A. Milne's charming plays, "Meet the Prince." They will present two other performances on Thursday and Friday, December 3 and 4.

Her 25 years people of Brookline and Boston, whose interest in good amateur productions is keen, have been in old Whitney Hall, at Coolidge Corner, two or three times each season and come away delighted and satisfied with their productions. The amateurs' choice of plays is never disappointing and all parts always appropriately cast.

Society Notes

How Do Women in the Movies Manage?

Filming a picture means weeks of work without a pause. The star can't stop because she is "indisposed!" The "Time of Month" does not excuse her. If you know some woman who is in pictures, she will tell you how Hollywood women manage. Try to find even an "extra" girl who doesn't carry Midol with her!

Midol was a marvelous discovery. It isn't harmful. It isn't a narcotic. But it acts in seven minutes—ends all pain or discomfort for hours at a stretch! Just ask for Midol at any drug store.

"Washes clothes whiter," says Mrs. Fannie Hansen of Arlington

"The man who sold me my new washer recommended Rinso because it's so safe and because it washes clothes whiter. I took his advice and I'm glad I did! I get such gleaming, colorful clothes now—without boiling, too. Rinso gives much richer suds than ordinary soaps, so I use it for dishwashing and for all cleaning."

MRS. FANNIE E. HANSEN, 8 Field Rd., Arlington, Mass.

Rinso is economical. Cup for cup, it gives twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps. Rich, creamy suds—safe for the finest cottons and linens. Because it soaks clothes clean—Rinso eliminates both scrubbing and boiling.

BARTLETT IS GRANITE STAE'S G. O. P. HOPE

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 19—The G. O. P., battered by recent defeats and still groggy on its feet, will put a White Hope forward in the person of former Governor John H. Bartlett for Congress.

And after that—

From Senator George H. Moses down to the newest tyro, they express utterly no confidence that they can win the Congressional seat vacated by the death of Congressman Fletcher Hale.

The district is overwhelmingly Republican, they say, BUT IN NORMAL TIMES.

And the times are so dislocated that they lost the Queen City to Dr. Damase Caron, mayor-elect, just as they lost the bye-elections in the normally Republican strongholds of Michigan and Ohio.

BARTLETT vs. ROGERS

The Republican and Democratic caucus to choose Hale's successor will be held in this hotbed of political revolt in two weeks and the victors will go to bat in a special election early in January.

It looks like Bartlett versus William N. Rogers of Wakefield and Concord, who was sent to Congress from the same district the last time the state revolted and elected Fred H. Brown its Democratic Governor.

For the Republican nomination there are three in the field:

JOHN HENRY BARTLETT, of Portsmouth. Political genius of Rockingham county since the regime of Judge Ernest H. Guptill. He is out of Dartmouth, naturally. He has been Governor. He has been chairman of the National Civil Service Commission under Harding. First assistant postmaster-general under Coolidge and is now chairman of the Canadian boundary commission under Hoover.

G. O. P. IN ROW

FERNANDO W. HARTFORD, of Portsmouth. A Manchester boy, he went there under the patronage of the late Frank Jones, brewery and railroad king, acquired newspapers and theaters and also the office of mayor, which he has held since no man's mind runneth to the contrary.

HAROLD HART, of Wolfeboro. He has been manufacturer and auto distributor. He was in the House, is now in the Senate, and although he went to Concord a conservative he tied in with Governor Winant's independent forces, but did not get himself elected Senate president, which he may in the future.

Republican rivalries and discords, moulded together with the dissatisfaction against Hoover and prohibition and unemployment, jeopardize the Republican chances in their ordinary stronghold.

There is no love lost between Moses and Winant, nor can Bartlett and Hartford be seen walking through Market sq. in fond embrace.

In the larger sense, the Republican conservatives look upon Winant as a prospective, formidable opponent against Moses for the Senate.

The Republican nominee, if it is Bartlett, can expect some lip service but little in the way of actual help from the Winant forces.

So, with this internal warfare and with the anti-Hoover and anti-prohibition sentiment fairly well crystallized, the G. O. P. approaches the fracas with apprehension.

Rozika Dolly Gets Divorce in Secret

Mineola, N. Y., Nov. 19 (AP)—Rozika Dolly, one of the members of the well-known sister team of the stage, has obtained a divorce from the wealthy Mortimer Davis.

The interlocutory decree, filed by Referee Charles Wood, becomes final in three months.

Salem, Nov. 19 (AP)—The will of Arthur P. Tenney of Haverhill, filed today, left the residue, after private bequests of $30,500 to the Old Ladies Home Association of Haverhill. The estate was estimated at $51,375.

The bequest would be known as the Tenney Fund in memory of Tenney's mother, Mrs. Caroline M. Tenney.

Injustice of Two-Thirds Rule Shown in Van Buren Regime

This is the second of a series of articles describing the workings of the two-thirds rule in the Democratic national conventio.. and the attempt that will be made at the next convention to abrogate it.

By LOUIS SEIBOLD

New York, Nov. 19 (US)—The flagrant injustice of the undemocratic two-thirds rule under which the Democratic party has chosen its presidential candidates for a century was clearly revealed 12 years after its adoption.

Van Buren, seeking a second term after a lapse of eight years, was the choice of the majority of the delegates who sat in the Baltimore convention in 1844.

The undemocratic two-thirds rule prevented the award of the nomination favored by this majority. The feuds and animosities generated during the stormy dominance of Andrew Jackson were revived to stop Van Buren, who was the popular choice of the majority. Van Buren was the target of these attacks.

The majority made a valiant fight for him, but the application of the undemocratic two-thirds rule rendered their efforts futile. After he received 146 votes, which gave him a clear majority, a motion was made to declare him the nominee.

POLK NOMINATED

It was ruled out on a technicality and Polk was nominated by a combination of the bosses of that day who were less interested in him than in vindicating their grievances against Van Buren, the political legatee of Jackson.

The undemocratic rejection of Van Buren provoked a storm of protest. But it only resulted in the tightening of the two-thirds rule by the convention of 1860. It was amended to require "two-thirds of the whole convention" instead of "two-thirds of the whole number of votes given."

This was also accomplished by a combination of the bosses of that day in order to strengthen their control in future contests.

An effort was made in the 12th Democratic convention in St. Louis to abolish the two-thirds rule. A Michigan delegate named Webber offered a motion declaring the two-thirds rule as "unwise and unnecessary" and requesting state conventions to instruct their delegates to the next convention whether to support or oppose the continuance of the rule. The motion failed by a narrow margin.

BALTIMORE IN 1912

If Democratic majority rule had prevailed at the Baltimore convention which nominated Woodrow Wilson in 1912, Champ Clark would have been chosen. On the 10th ballot, Clark polled 556 votes, which gave him a majority of 19 in the whole convention.

The New York delegates, who had been supporting Judson Harmon, switched to Clark on this ballot and the latter would have been named if Bryan had not deserted him and urged Woodrow Wilson.

The last definite move made to discard the undemocratic two-thirds rule was in 1920. A resolution urging the substitution of majority rule, presented in the national committee, was opposed by southern members headed by Sen. Carter Glass.

The resolution urged the committee to recommend to the nominating convention that the charge be made. The committee decided that such a step was beyond its function and the matter was dropped.

Supporters of the plan to abandon the two-thirds rule are now confident that if the matter is considered on its merits in the next convention, it will be decisively cast out as wholly inconsistent with Democratic principles.

JAMES B. NEVIN, EDITOR, DIES

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 19 (US)—James B. Nevin, editor of the Atlanta Georgian, died last night of a heart attack while seated at his desk.

Mr. Nevin, a native of Rome, Ga., was 55 years of age. For almost 20 years he had been continuously identified with the Georgian as political writer, managing editor and editor. He came to the Georgian in February, 1912, when the paper was acquired by William Randolph Hearst. For almost six years prior thereto he was editorial writer and paragrapher on the Washington Herald.

In addition to his widow, he is survived by three sons and two daughters. They are: M. A. Nevin, Atlanta attorney; J. B. Nevin, Jr., and Mrs. Tess Bradshaw, both on the staff of the Georgian; Mrs. Ida Nevin, president of this year's Asonia "Debutantes' Club," and a younger son, Henry.

LABOR AND RAIL HEADS CONFER ON WAGES

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Railroad presidents representing all sections of the country were meeting in joint conference here today with labor leaders for the purpose of discussing informally matters pertaining to wages, working conditions and unemployment.

The meeting was behind closed doors in the board of directors' room of the New Haven railroad, in the Grand Central terminal, and efforts were made to keep the conversations private. It was pointed out that no official action could be taken on any of the subjects.

Most important to the presidents, however, was the matter of an all-round cut of some 10 per cent in wages. It has been reported the labor men would broach the question of some form of voluntary reduction but the union leaders, it was said, had decided at a preliminary meeting yesterday that any proposal concerning wages must come from the rail officials.

THE VOICE OF Broadway

By Louis Sobol

Sh-sh! Have You Heard??

NOW I'M NOT GOING TO STARTLE you with the brilliant discovery that Broadway is only Main St. with subway kiosks and orange juice stands. Every other writer of and about Broadway has discovered that long ago and discussed it, for paragraphs and columns. There's no reason why it shouldn't be Mainstreety. Most of its people come from small towns—and that's not a new thought, either, but the fact remains that they do—and that they retain their small town ideas. That's why certain members of our newspaper tribe are enjoying a temporary—or perhaps, permanent (who can tell?)—flurry of popularity. What I'm getting at is that Broadway enjoys its gossip—as much as any Main Street.

And what is Broadway gossiping about these days? Well, almost everything. Whether, for instance, Ziegfeld made any money out of his Follies and whether it's true that he's planning a whirl at a few legitimate shows in between his glorifications. Are George Jean Nathan and Lillian Gish secretly married—are they going to be—or are they the perfect friends that an intelligent man and an intelligent and attractive woman should be? Is Joan Bennett over her crush for John Considine, Jr? Did you hear that Charley Levine is secretly married again to the widow of a physician? No kidding, is that so? Why, I didn't even know Levine was divorced?

Say, do you remember last June when this Sobol fellow said Ernest Truex was all aflame—that's the phrase he used, didn't he? —about a girl in his show who was the wife of a musician? Well, have you heard the latest? Her name was Jane Barrett, wasn't it? Well, she and Mike Durso got their divorce in Chicago just the other day, and now she and Ernest are getting married—in fact, I heard (and don't tell Sobol about it)—I heard that she and Ernest slipped off to Philadelphia and were married Monday. What's this I hear about Peter Arno bumping into Lois Long, his ex-wife, and confiding to her that if he ever married again she would be the girl? Sounds kind of preposterous—sure, I know—but don't those things happen?

Buzz-z-z! Did you hear this? Did you hear that? You don't tell me. Not that girl! Why, I could have sworn she was cah-razy about that guy? Ain't it the truth, though? Lis'sen, didja hear about Helen Morgan and Arthur Loew getting married just before they sailed back from Havana? I thought you couldn't get married in Havana unless you were there two weeks. Naw! Who ever told you that? I got it straight, see? They won't admit it, but it's so. That fellow there? That's Bob Garland. Yeah. He writes about shows. Sobol said last Christmas he and Queenie Smith were man and wife, and had been for some time, but Garland never lets on. It's so, too, and I don't know why they keep on pretending it's a secret. United Cigar stores buying up the Nedick orange juice stands? No, I didn't hear that. What would they want to do that for? So they could sell books in the open, do you think?

Old gossipy Broadway. Listen to the boys in the cafeterias—in the speaks—in the night clubs—around the ticker—in the post office. Get a load of their conversation. Hoover's holding off on that beer declaration until just before election. Washington's told the Federals to lay off the speaks for a while, but the Federal snoopers have secret orders from their chief to keep right on tossing the raps at the closed-door jernts. What's this about Jimmy Walker going to head a big movie concern at 150 gees a year? Aw, what does he want a job like that for? Norma Talmadge and that Gilbert Roland guy are just as through as one-way traffic in the Holland Tunnel. I'm giving this to you straight—I know a girl whose cousin goes around with Roland's best friend—you wouldn't want to get it any straighter than that wouldja? Sure, I know they went to Honolulu. What of it?

Say, is it true Peggy Joyce went in to hock a diamond bracelet Monday just to find out if what that guy who gave it to her in Paris said it cost was true? And found every other diamond was paste? What do you think of that fellow, Eddie Cantor, knocking off over eight grand a week at the Palace, and they say George Jessel's getting almost five. Boy, oh, boy! Just for a few wise-cracks and a song and they get all that jack. Sure they do—I read it somewhere. They all get big money. Say, it's all breaks. I was up to Smithy's house Saturday and I stopped them cold with my gags. New ones, too —what I thought up myself. Well, if they was good there, they'd be just as good at the Palace—but don't make me laff. Can you see me getting a chance to go on at the Palace? That's the only business—acting. Never have to worry about getting up in the morning—and how much work do you do? Nothing—nothing at all. Well, some guys has got all the luck.

And Park ave.—and Sutton pl.—and Fifth ave. Maybe you don't think they love it, too. Gossip, I mean. Takes it from me, they eat it up. Gracie, you'll die. You know Natalie Coe—with all her money—well, you'll scream. She's working. Yes! Working! Oh, I don't know —saleslady or model—or something like that. Heaven, what she ever wants to work for I don't know. Oh, hello, hello, you darling. When did you get back. No? Really. Countess di Frasso and Gary Cooper. Honestly! Well, of course, I know she and Carlo have—well, you know —but Gary Cooper? Isn't he that cowboy person? Isn't it woo-der-ful? Did you read Cholly Knickerbocker this morning? Isn't he just too ducky for words. Oh, yes, I've met him. You have to be so careful with him. He knows everything. No I didn't hear. Vincent Astor, you say? Well, of course, I always knew he was conservative; but not that conservative. I let Angie go Monday. She was just too impossible. She fell in love—imagine that. After all those years with me.

At any rate, you get the idea. The office boys, for instance. Aw, see you. He could hit a homer all the time, but they won't let him. Say, Dempsey ain't no fool. He's just waitin', and what'll you bet he's gonna fight Gene Tunney? He's just waitin', that's all. Sure, I got it straight. I seen something where this guy Bill Corum says Tunney's gonna fight, and how much you bet it's Dempsey? Say, 'dja hear about the boss and Miss Jenesy? O poppa. Wouldn't'ja know? She knows her onions. She's got the swellest legs in the office—and maybe she don't know it. Aw, that Beery guy—that's just in the picture. He can't fight a lick. They putcha in a picture and they say "fight," and someone else fights, and when it comes out it looks like Beery's doing it. My uncle works for Paramount—and maybe he don't spill the dirt about those guys. They ain't so hot.

Studio Adopts New Lights

Those picturesque Hollywood characters who figure in casting directories as stand-ins, are slated to lose their occupation, since the coming of the new "fast film" which was used for the first time in filming "Five Star Final," melodrama written by Louis Weitzenkorn formerly editor of the World and the New York Graphic. The picture opens today at the Olympia and Uptown.

The invention does away with the many lights formerly used in shooting scenes. The terrific heat caused by them, was the reason that stand-ins were employed to stand in the set before cameras, while camera crews adjusted lights so as to get just the right shadows on faces of players.

Kay Francis Gets Month Off With Full Pay as Picture Is Postponed

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, Nov. 19—Kay Francis is out of a job temporarily. This is how it happened. Kay, signed by Warners, was scheduled to report at the Warner Brothers studio October 15.

Louella O. Parsons

She was kept busy at Paramount until November 7.

Meantime the Paramount bosses decided they must have Kay for the lead in "The Master Key." There just wasn't any other actress who could play the part. Many conferences! Hurried consultations with the result Jack Warner agreed to hold up production on the First Francis picture until Monday December 14.

Now here comes the catch in the story. Kay, free from her Warner obligations was signed by Paramount for five weeks at the same salary she is to receive from Warners.

So far so good. A day or so after reading the script Paramount decided to postpone "The Master Key" so now Miss Francis on full pay is not working at either studio and won't be until December 14.

Ah, ha. Hawkshaw the detective! Gloria Swanson and her bridegroom, Michael Farmer, are in seclusion in Santa Barbara. There they remain until Saturday when they take the train for New York, traveling via the Panama Canal. A brief hour or two in the big town and then aboard a steamer and sail away for a European honeymoon. That reminds me despite all contradictions and denials, Mr. and Mrs. Farmer were in Los Angeles for a few hours Saturday after their marriage. Retakes on "Tonight or Never" were made. I am told that certain cuts have been made in the picture because of fear of censorial interference.

What is going to happen to Jean Harlow on her Howard Hughes contract? Miss Harlow has been receiving $250 a week. She hasn't collected her pay check for some time because she feels she is underpaid and that when she is loaned to other companies the balance of the Caddo Co. benefits. The Caddo Co. figures it took Miss Harlow from the ranks and that her salary at that time was considered a big one for a beginner. Two other companies in the offing are ready to sign Miss Harlow if she can get away from her Caddo contract. Meanwhile, she hasn't accepted her salary for some weeks.

The scenario writers are getting a break. Graham Baker, who was at First National for so long, first as scenario chief and then killer as production head, has been signed by Harry Cohn. Mr. Baker will not do any supervising of productions for Columbia. He will merely sit at the head of the scenario department, write scenarios and help select vehicles. Edwin Justus Mayer and Elmer Harris have also put their monikers on a contract to write for the Fox Co. It's good to learn the writers are getting the right recognition.

Frederic March. Paramount's pride and joy, was formerly named Frederick Bickel. Some years ago he was understudy to Lionel Atwill in "Deburah." Shows that no actor need regret being an understudy, for in the movies every day has its day. Mrs. Lionel Atwill's daughter is named Louise Brooks, and Miss Brooks' closest friend is a Nancy Carroll. Both girls are greatly interested in their movie namesakes. Mr. Atwill, according to reports from San Francisco, received a royal welcome in that city when he opened in his play.

He has definitely signed to play the lead in "The Silent Witness" for the Fox Co. Yes we had the story first.

6-HOUR DAY IS "ONLY HOPE" FOR MINERS

Tortured children . . . little warped bodies and souls twisted by hunger and cold . . . in the mining districts there are plenty such. Their fathers perform the basic function of industry; they are asking for a six-hour day and a living wage.

This is the fourteenth of a series of studies of the six-hour working day, advocated by William Randolph Hearst.

By LAURA VITRAY

A six-hour day for coal miners? In laying new plans for American industry, even the best of the economists overlook the unhappy men who toil down into our mines for coal, and their tragic, starving brothers, who no longer find work even in the mines.

It is the coal miners who keep the factory fires burning and the factory machines running. In a hundred thousand communities throughout the land . . . they who make possible most of the other industries. Yet the suggestion that they be included in a general plan of fair dealing through shorter working hours comes almost as a surprise.

FEW MAKE LIVING WAGE

Depression hit the bituminous coal industry as early as 1926. Electrification of machinery, and all sorts of modern inventions reducing the use of coal, destroyed labor in the coal fields even before they began eliminating vast blocs of employment in production.

Today in Alabama, Kentucky and West Virginia 50,000 men are working from 10 to 12 hours a day.

200,000 NEED FOOD

Some 200,000 idle miners have no prospect of finding food and shelter to keep their families alive this winter.

"The six-hour day is the only possible solution," John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine workers of America.

"As the result of ruthless, cutthroat competition, wages have been reduced to salt pork and calico sustenance. Miners are denying their own families necessities to keep their meager earnings with their more unfortunate brothers."

What is to be done with 200,000 starving miners and their wives and children?

With the increasing competition of oil and gas fuel in industry, it is estimated that in the future, in normal years, 500,000,000 tons of bituminous coal will supply the needs of the nation. With the long working hour now in force in the mines, the average production per miner is 200 tons, while 250 days a year is considered regular employment in the mines.

So it follows that on the present day basis of work, only 400,000 men are going to make a living out of the mines, even if prosperity should return.

NEED SIX-HOUR DAY

On a six-hour day basis, though, 800,000 men, working 250 days a year, would be needed to produce the required 500,000,000 tons of coal.

To prevent suffering and reassure their employes, certain industries are giving "guaranteed" work" to their wives. Tomorrow we will tell of the story of the city of Rochester, from which unemployment has been banished.

Boston Boasts Microphone Experts

By N. F. T.

Modern rhythms' murmuring maestro, Rudy Vallee by name, extends his warm welcome to a celebrity whose name adorns classic operas' realm—no less than Mme. Ernestine Schumann Heink. Christmas Eve finds the famous crooner presenting an equally renowned opera star as his guest artist.

RIDING AIR WAVES

Those "Three Horsemen of Notre Dame" known individually as Linus Travers, Ralph Gilroy and Gerry Harrison, saddle up day after tomorrow, lending themselves to the traditional Harvard-Yale football fracas. All credit has already been given here for the excellent account they gave of themselves last Saturday when Dartmouth turned back Cornell. No thought of the game ruined into which Ted Husing talked himself, is being entertained by the trio.

Yankee Network executives appear to be showing a brand of judgment equal, if not superior to Columbia chieftains in the matter of broadcasting New England sport spectacles. Only trained "mike" men, familiar with various competitive athletic tactics are employed here-about. For example, Fred Hoey does baseball (and how), Frank Ryan handles hockey, Ralph Gilroy pictures pigskin punts and passes. Gerry Harrison verbally fashions fisticuffs for fight fans ever so often wrestling with words, when towering grapplers lock legs and tangle torsos.

CHANGING STATIONS

Mickey Alpert musicaters moves over to WEEI as predicted here not long ago. Next Tuesday night, 11:15 to midnight, finds the likeable local stick swinger airing his orchestra, announcing and singing through transmitters. Who says this "colyum" guesses thigse?

If John (WBZ) Clark holds to his ideas about suggestive songs and "double-meaning" lyrics he very likely to do—Boston and WBZ may expect more nation-wide radio publicity one day. Naturally he thumbs down policy as to shady material but embraces network programs coming out of New York and Chicago as well as local offerings.

A veritable miniature army of studio and stage talent was ready and willing to work during the mammoth unemployment relief program on all Boston stations Tuesday night. Many were not needed, but deserve commendation for showing splendid spirit.

Personalities on the Air

WBZ has a "purity code." John Clark, station boss, declares anyone using "indecent quips and songs" on WBZ will be likely to join the army of unemployed.

Ted Husing said "hatrid" on CBS and crashed the front pages. If he said it on WBZ he'd likely crash the back door.

Why not revert to the old method? Instead of firing the culprit, a wash of soap in his mouth would make him live up to the "purity code."

B'loo bad radio can't invent the ten commandments for indelicate choice of language. What isn't'ra say about some p'grams would make the scrat b'dusting offenses seem like a sermon.

HISTORY OF NEXT "WAR," WITH LOW APOLOGY TO THE LEAGUE

By GILBERT SELDES

ALL I HAVE TO DO is ask the right questions, and the right answers obligingly appear. A few days ago I said frankly that I didn't know what they called the events in Manchuria, since the League of Nations was still working to prevent a "war" between China and Japan. Mr. Reuben Maury takes up the question, "What Constitutes a War?" and sends me the following account of an event in the future, as a historian may write it, "now that, out of consideration for the League of Nations and the Kellogg Pact, we don't use the word 'war.'" Mr. Maury may be a bit grim, but how else can you describe a war which is so totally unofficial?

A Brief Account

"Soviet Russia, at last feeling healthy enough to get even for the Polish and Rumanian territorial winning under the Versailles Treaty, sent 100,000 men into Poland and another 100,000 into Rumania in the S ring of 19—

"The men ied rifles, gasmasks, bayonets, automatics and large quantities of ammunition of all kinds. They were accompanied by light and heavy artillery, tanks, scouting and bombing planes, and other equipment essential to both trench and field warfare. In the opening days of these delightful excursions, the Russians killed a total of 11,000 Poles and 12,000 Rumanians.

"But, as Russia was careful to explain to the League of Nations, sitting in no little concern at Geneva, this was not war. The League was more than pleased to have such assurances from the Soviets, and promptly issued a 5000-word statement to the effect that the power of the Kellogg-Briand Treaty and of the League to prevent war had once more been demonstrated.

"At this juncture, France betrayed some pettishness about the Russian pleasure trips at the expense of France's allies, Poland and Rumania. France, in fact, sent what would have been called, in the bad old days, powerful expeditionary forces to both the Polish and Rumanian 'fronts,' to use a deliciously quaint old term.

A French Game

"No warfare was indulged in. As proof of that, we have the testimony of the League of Nations' officials records. Some unofficial fighting occurred—purely personal grudge affairs—with the net rusult that the Russians lost about 13,000 men, while the 'allies,' as some newspapers and magazines were tactless enough to call the Franco-Polish-Rumanian delegations, suffered casualties amounting to 16,500. The affair shortly settled down to trench ballplaying in the course of which a great deal of beautiful fraternizing was done among the soldiers of all factions—though unfortunately about 22,000 more men lost their lives in the course of three weeks.

Pleasure Trips

"Meanwhile, Italy had become irritated over what she termed the 'impoliteness' shown by France toward Russia. Italy and Great Britian joined the European love feast within 24 hours of each other, on opposite 'sides.' Italy's initial contribution to the get together was 50,000 men; Great Britian's 150,000 to 500,000 more promised as soon as might be. Great Britian also sent a fleet through the Dardanelles to keep the Turks composed, and laid a few battleship eggs along portions of the Italian coast to show that she welcomed Italy into the party.

"The festivities went on joyously for three years, with the League of Nations issuing peace proclamations every few days, and with the forces in the field shouting 'Hurray for peace and Mr. Kellogg and Mr. Briand and their treaty for the renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy!' as they fired their rifles and Bib Berthas at one another or carved their opponents' bellerinos with their bayonets. Not once was anybody heard to utter the word 'war,' so that it could not have been a war.

New Olympics

"American forces arrived on the scene late in the third year. The United States, while not belonging to the League of Nations, had become persuaded that its sacred duty was to send an adequate force of inquirers to find out whether there was a war going on in Europe and, if so, to put a stop to it.

"The American soldiers were at first brigaded with the British, but later were assembled in a distinctive American 'army,' and covered themselves with glory in the last few months of what the League of Nations by this time was calling the new Olympic games. In fact, unbiased analysts assure us that victory would have perched on the banners of the Muscovites and their allies had it not been for the Americans.

Unexpected Casualties

"After the signing of what, in the wicked old militaristic days, would have been called an armistice, Rumania took some more of Russia and so did Poland, while Great Britain got away with most of the Italian colonies in north Africa and France annexed a good acreage of north Italian territory. Heavy indemnity bills were presented to the Russians and to the Italians, collectable by all of the 'allies' except the United States, which was left holding what was jokingly called the 'sack.'

"Everybody agreed that a splendid time had been had by all, except some 1,675,000 men who had unaccountably lost their lives in something which was not a 'war.'"

Mr. Maury will be pleased to learn that Mr. Floyd Gibbons has departed for Manchuria to report "hostilities" for the International News. I should say that the first thing the League of Nations has to do is to create a new set of words for the newspapers to use. In our confusion we may forget the quotation marks over the bad old words; and the dying soldiers may utter a curse which will not be pleasant to hear.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT PROBLEM OF NOISE AND NERVES

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E. ROGERS

AT LAST BOSTON is following in the footsteps of New York and other cities and is going to attempt to take in hand the problem of the abatement of noise. Whether New York has made any actual progress in the problem I do not know. The people interested in that city have, I believe, collected a great deal of information as to measurements of noise, the noisiest places in town, and all that.

The scientists, I believe, have evolved methods of measurement whereby they can compare noises scientifically and correct those notions of ours about sounds which probably affect our nerves more than our ears. They call their unit of measure a decibel, if I am not mistaken—a curiously lovely word for such a harsh thing.

The Boston commission lists some 26 common noises and asks the harried citizen to pick the one which bothers him most. I wonder how far that will get us. Presumably those noises which receive the largest number of votes will be taken in hand first. Whether they will prove to be the most excruciating or the most harmful is another question.

A Matter of Taste Sometimes

The loud speaker in your own home, for instance, never annoys you as much as that in your neighbor's, in the apartment across the way or across the air shaft. And your annoyance at his radio, assuming that it is going only at reasonable hours, will depend largely on your tastes. The devotee of classical symphonies has no particular right to complain of jazz as noise. His Wagner may worry his neighbors' nerves quite as much. And vice versa.

Some of the noises that bother us most obviously do not need to exist. I am no engineer, but I have a kind of notion that the ratty-tat-tat of riveters on a sky-scraper is now outmoded and that electric welding can take its place. Some noises that bother people we would do well not to abolish. There is undoubtedly a feeling against the automobile horn. That is due quite possibly to the fool who, the moment he finds himself in a traffic tie-up, begins to sound off—provided he is far enough down the line so that the policeman cannot identify him.

But there is a prejudice against auto horns. People seem to look upon them as insults. You honk your horn at a careless pedestrian for his own protection and he is likely to give you an angry glare. Drivers, too, passing you on a narrow street or coming out of a side street, are notably more careless than they used to be about sounding their horns. I cannot agree with those who would restrict proper use of the automobile horn.

The squeal of a bad brake is terrible, but that can be cured. Automobile cut-outs are illegal, anyway. Traffic whistles and fire sirens are necessary. Factory noises are matters for employers and employes. They are hardly matters of public concern.

A Problem of Machine Age

There is no doubt that many motor cars, especially buses and trucks, operate more noisily than they need to. Partly the cause is careless and clumsy operation; more fundamentally, it is an engineering problem. I live just off a through way, over which, nightly, there is a heavy truck traffic to New York. Real estate values on that street, one of the most beautiful and famous in America, are suffering. No mere change in design or operation is going to take care of that. Through trucks must be taken out of residential districts. Cross-country roads must be made for them.

Recently a Massachusetts railroad, roused to action by bad grade-crossing accidents, promulgated an order for long and loud crossing whistles. At once the suburban neighborhoods were up in arms, bringing pressure to bear on the railroads. They pr[illegible]ered an occasional accident to constant discomfort.

Most modern noises are the inescapable accompaniment of a machine age. What can be done? Not very much, I fear. Regulations for thickly settled districts, hospital zones, and the like. Enforcement of existing regulations about horns, whistles, newsboys' shouts, night collection of ashes—which is not a Boston problem—and so forth. Possibly milkmen need not deliver in the gray hours of early morning. Possibly newsboys need not call attention to their wares vocally—though he must, indeed, be a complete nervous wreck who objects to a newsboy's call.

Noise Cheaper Than Silence

We can bring pressure to bear upon designers, engineers and manufacturers to make their apparatus as noiseless as possible. In that line much can be done. Our machinery is probably needlessly noisy, because noise is cheaper than silence. But a great many of our city noises are the inevitable result of an age that grows more and more dependent on machinery. Amelioration may be possible; abolition is not.

The plea will be made that noise injures efficiency; that typists can work more rapidly in a silent office than in a noisy one. With that plea I haven't much patience. The drive for efficiency, for saving at considerable expense a few minutes which are promptly wasted somewhere else, is not very impressive. Possibly the demand for efficiency, time-saving and all the rest, is as productive of noise as any single cause. If we had wasted a little more time in the past we shouldn't now be so completely in the grip of the time-saving machine. And most machines are noisy.

But it does seem to be true that noise is seriously affecting our nerves. Nervous diseases are on the increase. Noise is not entirely to blame. Pressure, speeding up, efficiency systems—all have their share. Perhaps a general slowing down of the tempo of life might kill three birds with one stone—high-pressure activity, concomitant noise, and resultant nervous trouble.

Little can be done by trying to regulate or stop any one particular source of noise irritation. Much might be done by slowing down the whole tempo of our city life. But that would involve a basic change in the American philosophy of living. So long as that philosophy persists, noise will continue and we shall have to grin and bear it—or go insane!

Here's That Dog

King, the pride and joy of the crew of the destroyer Jacob Jones, was hunted far and wide by members of the crew and police and by radio and phone. Today, King was found in Worcester. Just A. W. O. L.; that's all.

LOST NAVAL DOG 'WANDERS' FAR

King, missing police dog mascot of U. S. S. Jacob Jones, destroyer at the Boston Navy Yard, was found today in Worcester.

With word of the finding naval reinforcements engaged in a search of Greater Boston were withdrawn.

The dog, A. W. O. L. since Friday, when he disappeared in Cambridge, attached himself to a party of five Worcester men who motored down for the Harvard-Holy Cross game Saturday and was their insistent, unwelcome guest on the return trip.

Edward Coyle, Frank May, Raymond Burke, Joseph Quinn and Peter Barry found King occupying a seat in their car near the stadium after the game. They couldn't dislodge him, he apparently having decided that Coyle's was the best-going back of the many parked near the football field.

So they took him to Worcester and Coyle gave him house room until today when, reading that the gobs, not to mention the marines, had landed for an en masse shore party to conduct the search, he recognized his guest and communicated with navy authorities who will dispatch a "tug" to return King to the Jacob Jones.

A naval board of inquiry will be appointed to judge what punishment, if any, shall be King's lot.

SENT MONEY TO HELP PROVIDE CHICKENS

Ely's Order to Asylum Heads, However, Had Made Good Doctor's Act Unnecessary

The heart of Dr. Ray H. Shattuck of 487 Columbia rd., Dorchester, is in the right place—and only because Governor Ely acted faster than the mails did, Dr. Shattuck's kindly thought trails a bit under the wire.

When the good doctor read in the Boston Evening American that Commissioner George M. Kline of the Department of Mental Diseases had ordered that no turkeys, ducks, geese or chickens be served on Thanksgiving or Christmas to inmates of State hospitals, Dr. Shattuck sat down and wrote him a letter to the Boston Evening American.

Enclosing a $2 bill, Dr. Shattuck wrote:

"I am enclosing $2. It isn't much, but it should at least, with the help of the Boston American, start the ball rolling to raise a fund to provide at least chicken for the Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners.

"I know that those who know Gov. Ely feel that his recent order to the departments head to curtail expenses this coming year did not mean taking such miserable action as this and it is also said that it was done in an effort to embarrass the Governor."

While Dr. Shattuck's letter was in transit, however, Gov. Ely sharply overturned Commissioner Kline's order and the mentally deficient public charges of the State will have their turkey on Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Therefore, the Boston Evening American is returning to the kind-hearted Dr. Shattuck his $2 with the thanks of this newspaper for a good thought.

BROTHERS SEEK SHARE IN RICHES

Concord brothers, two of six claimants to a $7,000,000 estate in Ireland, will soon leave for there they said today, in the hopes of dividing a legacy 100 years old.

Patrick Mansfield, 70, a stone mason, who "retired because there was no work to do," and John Mansfield, 63, live a stone's throw from each other in modest little homes on Bedford st., Concord.

The other claimants are three brothers and three sisters who live in Ireland, they said.

Patrick, spokesman for the two, said the original estate of 100 years ago amounted to 5000 pounds and equalled $250,000 in American value.

It was left by the widow of Henry Mansfield, Irish ship builder, her death following close on that of her husband in 1830.

Incensed, according to Patrick, because her husband left the estate in trust to her, Mrs. Mansfield ordered that the estate be held in trust for 100 years before the principal and accrued interest be divided among the heirs then living.

Gift Box for Poor Stolen From Store

A Salvation Army Thanksgiving dinner contribution box was stolen from the fruit store of Ugo Sendinelli, in Washington st., in South Braintree. The container was three-quarters full.

THEIR NAMES MAY BE THEIR FORTUNES

BERNARD MRS. BRADLY VIRGINIA

RICHARD

Mrs. Mary Bradley of 32 Bromfield st., Watertown, and her three children, Bernard, 6½, Virginia, 4½ and Richard 2. Mrs. Bradley took the first syllable of each child's name, Berverdick and bought a ticket in the Irish sweepstakes in that name. The ticket drew Earnhill in the race and Mrs. Bradley stands to win when the race is run Nov. 28. If it wins she plans a trust fund for the children. (Staff photo.)

3 YOUNGSTERS STAND TO WIN

Three new, and youthful, horse followers sprang up today in Watertown.

Their mother, Mrs. Mary E. Bradley of Bromfield st., was one of eight Bay Staters to draw a horse in the Irish Free Hospital Sweepstake to be run in Manchester, Eng., Nov. 28.

Bernard, 6½; Virginia, 4½, and Richard, 2, form the trio of youthful jockeys that will be pulling for "Earn Hill," the horse their mother drew.

"The money we might win will be put in a trust fund for the children until they reach the age of 21," Mrs. Bradley said today.

She bought the ticket under the name of "Bervidric," a combination of the first three letters in Bernard, Virginia and Dick.

Other Greater Boston residents who drew horses in the $11,000,000 sweepstakes are: William J. Cody of East Third st., South Boston; Miss Delia Cahill of Bartlett st., Roxbury; Miss Agnes M. Joyce of Arborway, Jamaica Plain; Miss Rose McGuigue of Pearl st., Cambridge, and Louis R. Hickson of Clark's ct., Charlestown.

Two Merrimack Valley residents were the other two in the state who drew horses. They are Elizabeth Campbell of Lawrence st., Lawrence, and John F. Brady of Parker st., Lowell.

Cody, who has worked as an ironworker on the Boston Elevated for the past 25 years, is the father of seven children, whose ages range between six and 17 years.

John a Bit Off of Taxpayer's Route

John Callahan, 40, of South Boston, went to East Boston district court instead of City Hall, today, to pay his taxes. John began by soundly lecturing Clerk John S. C. Nichols in the latter's office.

Then the visitor laid siege to the courthouse for fifteen minutes. He stood guard at the front door and refused to allow anyone to enter. Patrolman William Hanson locked him up for tippling.

Frat Honor

Miss Frances Eldridge, of Melrose Highlands, who was among the nine Wellesley seniors elected to Phi Beta Kappa, honorary society.

FUGITIVE HIDES AMONG BLIND

A lodging house for blind men at Thomas pk., South Boston, was thrown into an uproar this morning as police pursued a boy prowler through the building.

Captured after he had slammed a door on the right hand of Patrolman Michael Cleary of City Point division, he gave his name as Fred Lemaine 19, of East Cottage st., Roxbury.

Patrolmen Cleary and Gardner dashed to the scene in a squad car on receiving a telephone call from William Dodge, proprietor of the lodging house.

Walter S. Barnes, Sr., 93, the last surviving member of Somerville first city government, died last night at the home of his son, Walter S. Barnes, Jr., 109 West Central st., Natick, sporting editor of the Boston Globe. He also leaves two other sons, Dr. H. A. Barnes of Dedham and Frank Barnes of Newton, and a daughter, Miss Florence Barnes of Brookline. He was a native of Enosburg, Vt.

He founded a paper box manufacturing business, which has had an unbroken existence since 1868. The funeral will take place Friday at 2 o'clock from the Natick address.

BOSTON YIELDS CLUE IN DEATH OF STARR

Secret Visit of a Long Island Official Here Is Explained

An important new Boston clue points to a possible solution of the mysterious death of Starr Faithfull, the beautiful Greenwich Village party girl, whose body was found at Long Beach, L. I., last June.

This, according to sources of the office of Dist. Atty. Elvin Edwards of Nassau County, Long Island, is the reason for the secret visit here of Asst. Dist. Atty. Martin Littleton, Jr., and Detective Sergt. J. B. Mayforth.

Whether the clue is linked with Starr's past life here in the drawing rooms of Boston society, with her exotic love affair with a wealthy Boston man, or with her stepfather's efforts to raise funds to save a valuable piece of property on Cape Cod the Boston Evening American's informant refused to say.

TRIP "SATISFACTORY"

While this veiled information was being given out at Mineola, L. I., the Nassau County representatives here were reticent, but Littleton did admit that the results of the trip were "satisfactory."

They did not call at Charles F. Rowley, the Boston attorney who has represented the Faithfull family in the settlement with the wealthy Bostonian for $20,000, nor did they see Alexander Whitney, who in the previous investigation acted as intermediary between the man and the press.

Littleton and Mayforth were accompanied here by two aides. They planned to leave for New York later today.

UNAWARE OF VISIT

The group made no attempt to communicate with police or the district attorney's office, and officials were unaware of their presence here until late last night.

Beyond admitting he had obtained evidence he was seeking, Littleton would say nothing. His visit was the second made by Nassau county officials to the city. Dist.-Atty. Edwards and Inspector King came here last summer in connection with the Faithfull probe.

GIRLS HURT, 2 YOUTHS HELD

Two injured girls, found early today on the Lynn road in Revere near Point of Pines, disclosed that their car had been struck by a speeding car.

The girls, who were cut and bruised but refused hospital treatment, gave their names as Gertrude Doherty, 18, and Sally McGilloway, 19, both of 26 Princeton st., Charlestown.

Later Officer Oda Sutton of Revere police picked up in Chelsea Frank Bialkowski, 21, of 53 Cherry st., alleged driver of the car, and Walter Escott, 20, of 9 Third st., both Chelsea.

Sutton said he would seek complaints charging the youths with leaving the scene of an accident without meeting known their identity and other charges.

The girls told police they met the men in Chelsea and were riding with them when the car skidded and tore through the fence, shooting over a railroad embankment near the Point of Pines bridge. The young women made their way back to the road and a passing autoist took them to Lynn.

HOOVER COMMENDS N. E. COUNCIL AS MODEL FOR ALL AMERICA

7 GOVERNORS PRESENT AT CONFERENCE

Leslie of Indiana Is Speaker With Executives of Six Regional States

Greeted by a message of praise from President Hoover for having "courageously shown the way to the entire country" by its labors, the New England Council, with the governors of the New England states, today opened the seventh annual New England Conference at the Hotel Statler.

The opening meeting was an executive session of the council and the governors at 11 a. m., followed by a luncheon and the first general session this afternoon at which the President's message will be read.

"The council," President Hoover wrote, "has taken upon itself the duties and the responsibilities it aims can best discharge. It has labored earnestly and effectively for the good of the six states it serves. Furnishing a model of far sighted and intelligent cooperation, it has courageously shown the way to the entire country.

CAUSE FOR GRATITUDE

"The people of New England have true cause for gratitude for the splendid efforts of the Council in behalf of the unemployed. There has been no finer cooperation with the agencies concerned with unemployment than that afforded by the Council."

Harry C. Knight of New Haven, president of the Council, presided at the opening session, at which the principal address was delivered by Governor Harry G. Leslie of Indiana. Other speakers were Governors Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, Stanley C. Wilson of Vermont, Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut, William Tudor Gardiner of Maine, John G. Winant of New Hampshire and Norman S. Case of Rhode Island.

President Knight, referring to "visible signs of economic recovery now appearing on the business horizon," said that the first job facing New England on the path back to prosperity is completion of the unemployment relief programs of the six states.

"Secondly," he said, "stability of employment should be accepted as an essential policy of business for the future. In pursuance of this conviction the council will continue to urge strictly for the present and adoption of definite plans as business resumes.

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY

"It holds that through cooperative action there is a golden opportunity for New England to show leadership to the nation."

Surveys of business management with a view to improving the methods of individual concerns and consideration of the question of public expenditures as reflected in local tax problems also were sited by the council's president as two of its chief aims for the immediate future.

Taxation also was the topic of Gov. Leslie, who explained to the meeting the "Indiana plan" for the control of local public expenditures and told how it has saved taxpayers in his state more than $74,000,000 while "preserving local government and home rule."

"The plan provides for a state tax commission," Gov. Leslie said, "which, upon appeal of any ten local taxpayers from a proposed tax levy or a proposed bond issue of more than $2500 by local officials, must review the case on its merits and has the power to prevent the expenditure, or the bond issue, but never to increase them."

WARNS OF MILK WAR

Gov. Wilson of Vermont warned the Council and New England business men generally that the dairy farmers of this section, with upward of a billion dollars invested and milk sales reaching $100,000,000 annually, will tolerate no interference with efforts to put their industry on a paying basis, and reminded his audience that "the prosperity of a great part of New England is directly dependent on the prosperity of the dairy farmers."

He urged support for New England Dairies, Inc., a co-operative milk marketing organization recently formed by the dairymen with the aid of the Federal Farm Board and expected to be in operation soon.

Without such an organization functioning, Governor Wilson said there is danger of a milk war, which would result in such loss to the farmers that the quality of New England's milk supply might be dangerously impaired.

Further organization of the agricultural and industrial interests of New England, "so that she may be in a large measure self-contained as she was in her early history, and find a market for her goods and products in exchange for other goods and other products beyond her boundaries," was recommended by Governor Cross of Connecticut, who praised the work of the council in this direction.

REAL ESTATE MEN URGED TO AID SALES TAX

Exchange Directors to Take a Vote on Indorsement of Plan at Next Meeting

William J. McDonald, the realtor responsible for the development of Park sq., urged the directors of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange last night to get behind the movement for a sales tax.

VOTE ON INDORSEMENT

"I urge the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange to get back of the sales tax movement which William Randolph Hearst has advocated in his newspapers," McDonald said. "Such a tax on retail distribution of all manufactured goods would produce a great income."

A special congressional delegation from Washington is in Canada as guests of William Randolph Hearst to study the sales tax system.

John T. Scully, executive secretary of the Real Estate Exchange, asked the board to consider the sales tax and to vote on its endorsement at the next meeting, to be held the second Tuesday in December.

ONLY FAIR TAX

"William Randolph Hearst regards the sales tax as one of the most important tax measures of the country. Through the columns of his newspapers he has advocated its adoption in this country. If a sales tax will be the means of lightening the burdens of the real estate taxpayer, I am for it," Scully said.

Atty. Guy T. Emerson, of 487 Main st., Waltham, a student of taxation, also urged the Real Estate Exchange to support the movement.

"A sales tax must come because of conditions in this country today," Atty. Emerson said. "A sales tax is the only fair tax we can have. We have a form of sales tax in this state today in the gasoline tax. Such a tax is one in which the burden cannot be shifted."

William S. Felton, Salem realty man and chairman of the committee on taxation, said:

"A sales tax is a scientific method of apportioning the cost of governments, if the revenues of such a tax were properly guarded it would be a relief to real estate taxpayers."

Milk Is Essential to the Proper Development of Bones and Teeth

To The Mothers Whose Children Won't Eat

A Simple Way to Correct Poor Appetite

Nature knows best. Never coax a child to eat! Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite. When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, don't give small children a constipating cathartic that drains the system. California syrup of figs is all the "medicine" they require.

The Child's Appetite Will Always Respond

Specialists will tell you that a sluggish appetite almost always means the child has a sluggish colon. Correct this condition called stasis, and see how quickly a tasteless, drooping boy or girl begins to eat—and gain! The only "medicine" such children seem to need is pure, unadulterated syrup of figs.

Children who get syrup of figs, now and then, soon have the appetite and energy of young animals! They keep well and avoid colds and sluggish spells.

Begin Tonight

Nature never made a finer laxative for children; and they all love the wholesome, fruity flavor of the real California syrup of figs. It's purely vegetable, but every druggist has it all bottled, with directions. Begin with it at once. The very next day, your child will be eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight, and spirits.

A SINGLE "IF"

The promises made by the bottlers of California Syrup of Figs are true, and it will do the same for you, IF it's genuine CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs. Don't accept substitutes.

SOME WOMEN ALWAYS ATTRACT

You want to be beautiful. You want the tireless energy, fresh complexion and pep of youth. Then let Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help free your system of the poisons caused by clogged bowels and torpid liver.

For 20 years, men and women suffering from stomach troubles, pimples, listlessness and headaches have taken Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, a successful substitute for calomel, a compound of vegetable ingredients known by their olive color. They act gently upon the bowels without griping. They help cleanse the system and tone up the liver.

If you value youth and its many gifts, take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets nightly. How much better you will feel—and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food don't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a bilious headache. Your hand and your breath is foul. Skin often breaks out in blemishes. You feel sick and you feel down and out. You whole system is poisoned.

To take these good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel up and up. They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't quit by your pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Insist! Refuse substitutes. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

CAVAGNARO MANY TIMES WALKED IN THE SHADOW OF DEATH

NEVER SECURE FROM FOE'S THREATS

Inspector's Activities Against the Underworld Long Had Made Him a Marked Man

By THE MASKED REPORTER

Copyright, 1931, Boston Evening American, All Rights Reserved

The shadow of death—sinister, sudden death—many times enveloped "Big Joe" Cavagnaro. Many times his powerful underworld enemies were ready to strike. Probably nothing but death itself, from another source, could have thwarted them.

Thwarted them, yet still a boon to them, for more than one man who was marked for death by the underworld has been permitted to breathe more freely today. Joe Cavagnaro's eyes are closed forever and his lies in his coffin in his Brighton home.

The Damori case threatened to spell the doom of this big, genial, efficient police inspector. Joe never knew when, out of this investigation or that of Albert Bruno, alleged slayer, death would dart.

And in and out of both these probes, disappearing, disappearing with Joe ever on his trail, walked Peter Giambruno, Peter the Sheik.

Joe and Peter are both dead now. Inspector Cavagnaro's persistent efforts to solve the Damori killing are ended.

I am going to tell today the hitherto unrevealed inside story of that case.

As everyone knows, a boy of 10, Salvatore Damori, was the victim. His father had refused to pay blackmail. The lad disappeared. Eleven days later his body was found on the Saugus marshes.

His father told Sergt. Robert Mooney and Special Officer Mark Maddox of the Hanover station that he had paid $5000 after he had been advised by one of two brothers well known in the North End.

They told him this was the only hope he had of getting his son back but later it developed that at the time this advice was given, the boy was already dead.

While the two police officers were investigating, information was carried to Dist. Atty. Foley that two men had visited the Damori neighborhood for several days prior to the boy's disappearance.

CLUE IN DIARIES

There was further information concerning their identity, and Foley assigned Inspector Cavagnaro with instructions to establish the identity of the writer of the black-hand letters received by Damori.

There was no conflict between Cavagnaro and the other policemen on the investigation. Each had separate angles of the case and were to co-operate when the right time came.

Shortly afterward Cavagnaro came into possession of the diaries of Peter the Sheik, whose record as a bomber and extortioner was well known throughout the East. Giambruno had served a term in New York for his part in 75 bombings.

The handwriting in the diaries appeared in some respects similar to that in the Damori letters, and Cavagnaro and Sergt. Mooney went to New York to consult penmanship experts. The most famous experts in the world were then in convention there.

LEFT-HANDED MAN

After two or three days' study it was decided that the writing in the Damori letters was not that of Peter the Sheik, but Joe Cavagnaro did not stop there.

With the aid of a New York detective, Felix de Martini, he obtained several samples of Peter's handwriting, a sample dating back to 1913 when Giambruno went to prison for the bombings.

He then went to Capt. Osborne, a famous New York expert, who gave as his opinion that the handwriting in the Damori letter was partly that of a left-handed man.

Through United States postal agents who had devoted five years trying to connect Giambruno with blackhand letters in 13 eastern cities, Cavagnaro learned that while at Great Meadows prison, Peter the Sheik had learned to write with his left hand as well as with his right.

THROUGH WAITER.

Meanwhile two men, known gangsters, living in the North End, were put under surveillance by private detectives employed by Dist. Atty. Foley.

During 10 weeks' surveillance, they saw one or both of these men almost daily enter a certain North End cafe as Peter the Sheik left it. Giambruno breakfasted there and supped there almost daily.

But he was never there at the same time as these two gangsters. Not a word or a nod passed between them when they passed on the street near the door of the place.

Cavagnaro saw that the two men were getting whatever information Peter wanted to pass to them through a waiter, who was getting it from Peter, giving it to the two gangsters and returning their answers to Peter when he called for supper.

Before the waiter could be identified he disappeared, but following his disappearance he was identified as Guiseppi Napoli, who was wanted in Cleveland for possession of dynamite.

FORCED THEIR HAND.

At that time a large supply of counterfeit bills was being put in circulation and Giambruno was picked up by federal agents here as a suspect.

A curious circumstance preceded his arrest. A well-known booze runner went to the federal agents and asked them if they were looking for Giambruno. They were not ready for the "pinch" at that time and denied it.

The same man went to the district attorney's office and asked if Cavagnaro wanted Peter the Sheik. The outcome was that the Government men took him into custody before the time was ripe. He had forced their hand and when questioned presented an alibi showing he was not in the cities where the counterfeit bills had been issued.

When releasing him they asked him to sign the usual paper absolving them from a charge of false arrest.

Giambruno laughed.

"Don't worry," he told them. "I'll never cause you any trouble for picking me up. And by the way, tell Big Joe that he will have to find my signature some place else."

Cavagnaro obtained other samples of the handwriting not only of Giambruno, but of the two gangsters, but Capt. Osbornes invariable report was that the writing varied so greatly each time Giambruno signed his name, that no expert would dare to go into court and say what was his and what was not his.

Shortly after Cavagnaro made a report on the case to his superiors, Peter the Sheik met him in front of the Hanover st. police station and told him with a grin:

"If you find any more samples, bring 'em to me and I will be your expert."

DEATH ENDED HOPES

But more than once during the course of the long investigation, which never ended, except with Joe Cavagnaro's death, the police inspector received something more than a laugh and a sneer from the men who knew that, sooner or later, if given time enough, he would round them all up.

It was one of Joe Cavagnaro's fondest hopes to bring to justice the slayers of ten-year-old Salvatore Damori.

But Big Joe has joined the lad in death, and the dynamiter, whose nemesis Cavagnaro was, has been dead for eight months.

And criminals who long have lurked in the shadows will be out in the open to watch Big Joe's funeral. They will watch the cortege wind into the North End and away again to the cemetery, with lighter hearts.

And that is Big Joe's testimonial.

CONRY SCORES HULTMAN ON 'BEER RAIDS'

Traffic Commissioner Joseph A Conry fired another sizzling broadside at Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman today, accusing him of laxity in enforcing the traffic laws and too much zeal in leading raids on "kitchen beer parties."

The verbal attack was wholly unexpected, as an armistice between the two officials both of whom have offices at police headquarters has been in force for some time.

The attack came following a meeting of the traffic commission of which the police head is a member at which steps were taken to add amending the parking rules.

RATHER GO RIOTING

The court recently ruled that a policeman must know who actually parks a car illegally. Knowing the owner won't help a bit the traffic

Conry's statement indicated that the meeting had been another clash between him and the police commissioner.

"The police commissioner never desired to enforce our traffic regulations," he said. "He publicly confessed this feeling in the mayor's office on July 3.

"He would rather raid a kitchen beer party in person, setting a stimulating example of energy for portly policemen.

"The traffic commissioner on many occasions requested the police commissioner to assign a police officer to accompany traffic investigators and secure first-hand evidence of flagrant violations.

"The police commissioner refused, saying, 'It's not good form.

"While kitchen barrooms are vigorously raided, our business section can sweat in congestion without relief from the police commissioner.

"He now laments the difficulty of dealing with offending car parkers. A competent officer in Springfield, Capt. John C. Maloney, solved the 19th annual safety congress on Sept. 30, 1930, and gave his views on the matter now perplexing Boston's police commissioner."

Commissioner Conry then quoted Capt. Maloney regarding reports to the registrar of motor vehicles regarding car owners who refuse to tell the names of drivers who parked the cars illegally. He demanded to know why Commissioner Hultman did not apply this remedy.

It was said at police headquarters that Boston police have been doing this for some time

BIG JOE'S BODY ARRIVES HOME FOR LONG REST

In a gray coffin, lined with white satin, the redoubtable police inspector lies in the bosom of his family on the second floor of the two-family dwelling at 45 Kenrick rd.

For a few hours the widow, daughters and other relatives had him for their own before his countless friends began to arrive to pay their last respects.

In death he looks serene, showing no sign of the automobile accident which caused his end at Middleton, N. Y., on Tuesday, as he tricked a gang witness in the Gloucero murder case.

The body arrived from New York last night and after being taken to the undertaking rooms of Michael Porcella on North Bennet st., North End, was removed to the

The official tribute of the police department will be paid Inspector Cavagnaro during the obsequies Saturday, when there will be a solemn high mass of requiem at Sacred Heart Church in North av., North End, at 10 30. Burial will be at Old Calvary, Forest Hills.

IT'S A MAN'S WORLD—NO FEAR OF AMAZONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

LOTS OF MEN profess to fear that the race will soon be ruled by Amazons, and that man will be relegated to the kitchen, the boudoir and the back seat.

There is one little trick of Old Dam Nature, which has given man the whip-hand over woman—and will help him to keep it, no matter how strong and big and brave she may become. Woman cannot live without love!

And, just so long as love is a necessity to woman and a mere luxury to man, Adam can keep Eve jumping through hoops and begging for sugar.

To man, love is one of life's incidental pleasures. To woman, it is a CAREER—and she allows nothing to interfere with it seriously. She may go in for lots of other things—business, society, law, art, medicine—but they are all just sidelines; little running accompaniments to the real motif of her life.

She may resort to work or a profession, while she is waiting for her Life's Dream to come true; she may turn to it for consolation after the Dream has been shattered. But it will always remain an AVOCATION. Something to employ her mind and energy while she is "marking time" and looking for the Big Moment —waiting for the Great Adventure.

To one man, love may be an inspiration, to another it may be a pastime, a beautiful adventure or a hobby. But, it is never a man's GOAL!

From childhood woman finds love an abiding thought. Nothing can crowd it out! It is always in the back of her consciousness, no matter what else she may be doing, from mixing a pudding or taking dictation to buying a hat.

But, to a man, love is merely a transient mood, instantly dispelled by the demand of anything more vital, from signing a big contract to making a good score at golf eating a satisfying dinner or planning a honing-trip

Why, then, all this masculine anxiety over woman's growing "power?" Be still, sad men, and cease repining! A cigarette, a spot and a harrell will never be BIOLOGY! And a strong mind will never give women "power" over men, so long as she has a weak heart!

Rollo Tells Venice of His Love

VENICE PICKED up the telephone. "Hello, Rollo"

"Hello, Venice. You're not angry with me, are you?"

"Of course not."

"When may I see you?"

"Tomorrow?"

"Fine. We might dine somewhere."

No, not another night when she might miss that telephone call. The week is almost up, went her mind.

"You come to dinner here, Rollo. I'll ask Lola and Jerry and we'll have some contract."

"Two's company, Venice. Four's a nuisance."

Two's a nuisance was what was in her head, but she said sweetly, "Never up, Rollo."

"I must, I suppose. What time?"

"Seven-thirty."

Venice went early to bed with a book. She could not concentrate. He rmind reviewed New York's reception of the Venice Muir for whom a marquis had killed himself. The same Venice, sensitive and only able to make light conversation when sudden attention went to her head, but men asked to be introduced to her at parties now and she had never once this winter come home from an entertainment alone. Three men had tried to kiss her, five had succeeded in holding her hands. It was fantastic, grotesque. It didn't actually matter what you were; it only mattered what people thought you were. She sighed. She enjoyed people liking her, but did they really like her for what she honestly was. It all seemed empty and futile and lacking in any of the qualities that actually warmed your insides and gave you genuine happiness. She had won the so-called popularity for which she had so long striven and she was lonelier than she had ever been in all her life. Like eating food that did not nourish you. She wondered if her mother could be cognizant of her distress. How glad she must be, Venice at last on the brittle pinnacle she had always urged her to scale

The next evening she took great trouble with dinner. Lola and Jerry came early so that Jerry could mix something unusual in the way of cocktails. Roland Wainwright arrived with a box of tailor-made roses.

"My Goddess," Lola whispered as Venice arranged them in a vase, "you've got him hooked! What are you going to do with him?"

"Sweet is the sweet" Venice almost disliked him. He had also bragged in his first five minutes of three dinner invitations that he had refused for the same evening.

The contract was spirited Rollo played a brilliant game and Venice marveled how card sense had nothing to do with the rest of one's intellect

"Alone at last," sighed Roland Wainwright, leaning towards the blaze that crackled cheerily in the wide fireplace.

"No, I'm here," smiled Venice She sat at quite a distance from him in a large chair and could not help admiring the glow from the flames in his gay blue eyes and the way it turned his yellow crest to gold

"I wish you wouldn't always be so clever with me, Venice."

"I'm not really. You misinterpret my simple words. She was really want to know exactly what I'm like, Rollo?"

She would relish trying to explain honestly. It would be fun to tell him of her shyness her lack of any social upbringing

"I certainly would."

"I'm really a very diffident person. I'm not a good conversationalist. I like books and pictures and I love to talk about life and death and marriage in the abstract, all the things one wonders about."

"Well, why don't you, then?"

"Very few people would want to listen to me."

"Thank God for that"

"Exactly."

There was a pause

"Do you remember that dinner at the Philip Mannings' when you carefully ignored me and then kissed me so impertinently, Rollo?"

"No. When was that? As a matter of fact I don't recollect exactly when it was we first met."

He was sincere. Even his insolence towards her has made no impression on him She was right. He could not even recall when they had been introduced. It was the real Venice that he had hurt a manufactured Venice that he favoured. She felt bitter towards him. She could see herself now left standing alone with that liquor glass in one hand while he hurried across the foyer to that other girl hidden away somewhere

"I don't remember either," she said easily.

He suddenly got to his feet and came and put his hands on her shoulders

"I love you, Venice."

She was embarrassed and looked away although she did not move

"Will you marry me?" he asked softly.

(Copyright, Harriet Henry)

Venice's answer does not come quickly, tomorrow. She plans a way to get revenge for the insult Rollo once gave her.

A SEASON'S GREEN HAT

Suggestion of a Highland Bonnet

SKETCHED IN PARIS

Empire green felt makes this small hat from Marcelle Lely. The brim turns up sharply at each side and is pulled forward in a point suggesting a Highland bonnet. The hat is worn very much to one side and a sweeping narrow wing in matching green clings closely to the side back of the hair at the opposite side.

A Husband Comes Back--And a Wife Is Worried!

By WINIFRED BLACK

ONCE LONG AGO I read a strange story.

It was about a man who found in a traveling carriage a shabby little box which no one seemed to own. He picked up the box and carried it with him to his room in the inn where he was to stay for the night.

He went downstairs to supper, but when he came up to his room again he noticed a light—and the light came from a chink in the shabby box.

He set his eye to the chink, and there inside the box was a tiny room furnished with chairs and a sofa and a table and a little piano, and in the room was a little wee woman setting the table for her supper, for all the world like a woman of regular size. The man lost all interest in the outer world; all day he wandered about waiting for darkness so that the light would shine again in the little box and he could look through the chink and see the strange wee woman at her own little life shut up in the strange shadowed little box.

Here's a letter that made me think somehow, I don't quite know why, of that queer little story.

Dear Winifred Black

Several times I have written you letters asking for advice, but have not sent them, thinking my trouble was imaginary

For one year and a half my husband has neglected me. I thought it was business and that he got his home life at his brother's, where he goes every day for a delicious dinner. Over a month ago I learned that his bookkeeper had been his sweetheart most of the time. She is a divorcee with two children.

We have been married ten years and have two lovely children

She is discharged now, and he has not gone to her. I have proven to him I trust him now. He realizes his place is at home with me and his children. He goes to church with us now. I seem to know what to do when I read my lesson, but when the time comes to practice what I read I can't do anything. I let opportunities go

Is there any chance of my throwing my love at my husband? Would it matter? He said I made him think I did not love him. However, I am making up for lost time now and need good sound advice

You seem to know what to do every time.

R. H

All locked up in the queer little box of her own narrow little life, poor little woman, isn't she? Well now, my dear, how can I advise you? The only thing I can say is stop thinking of the trouble that has passed, live every day hour by hour, be happy, be glad that your husband has come back to himself again Don't think so much of yourself and don't think so much about him either Be simple and natural, when you love him. Tell him so and when he tells you he loves you, let him see how glad you are.

What! A woman with two lovely children and a husband who really does love her, if she'll let him—how can she be blue about anything on earth?

Let me hear from you again—and tell me that you are happy again

Need Care in Cooking Sausages

By MARTHA LEE.

"HOW CAN I cook sausages so that they won't burst open?", wailes Mrs. J. V. T. of Natick—echoing a problem that comes to almost every novice housewife and sometimes it is a problem that her mother hasn't as yet solved

We've been boasting for a good many years that we have mastered the art of perfect sausage cooking and we tried to prove same last week in our cooking classes, by serving quite an enormous number of succulent brown sausages, not one of which had even peeked out of its skin

Many people, I find take the sausages right out of the ice box or cold pantry and put them in a frying pan over a good hot fire. Then, of course, the sudden expansion of the cold sausage filling causes the sausage meat to burst from the skin. Sausages should be kept in a warm room for an hour before cooking and they should be parboiled for 4 or 5 minutes, whether they are to be baked or fried.

I like to put them on in a large frying pan, cover them with cold water and bring them to a boil and let them boil for 3 minutes. Then I drain off the water and put the frying pan back on the fire over a low flame and cook the sausage until they are a delicate brown, shaking the pan from time to time Or they may be arranged on a broiler, as we did in the Martha Lee Cooking School, and baked slowly under a low gas flame in the broiling oven.

The sausages we served in the Martha Lee Cooking School last week have just made their bow in the food world. They belong to the same family as the savory sausages and hams that come in the red and white checkered packages, with which many of you are familiar, and we found them mild in flavor and surprisingly free from shrinkage when cooked.

Apples baked and stuffed with sausages are a delectable and truly delicious besides being easy to prepare. Core the apples and insert one sausage in each. Place the apples in the baking pan and lay the remaining sausages around them, allowing in all about three sausages for each apple. Bake in a hot oven—being careful to choose apples that will bake quickly. They should not take over 45 minutes to cook to perfection

Yours faithfully

Martha Lee

Daily True Story

Mistaken Identity

THE LONG QUEUE of the bread-line moved forward slowly, men hunching their shoulders against the chill of night and waiting with the unwearied patience of the defeated.

Here and there, however, was one who held high his head and looked straight ahead, the victim of circumstances forced by hunger to forget pride.

Ahead there was a slight commotion in the line. Two men were passing along it, peering intently into the faces of those in line. Hal Martin, shivering slightly in the wind, stepped slightly out of line to see what was happening. The two men drew closer

"They're looking for me," said a muffled voice behind him. Then, as he started to turn, she voice said, "Please don't move. If you stand like that I can hide behind you and they won't see me."

The two men came closer and then passed by after glancing at Hal. "Probably a couple of coppers looking for a guy," some one said. But Hal, seeking another explanation, turned to the youth who had hidden behind him

"Is that right?" he whispered. "Are the police looking for you?" At the same time he thought to himself, "Why, he's only a kid!"

SAVES KID

"Don't talk so loud," answered the "kid," though Hal had barely whispered. "Wait until we get something to eat and then I'll tell you about it. I'm terribly hungry."

The line plodded slowly on until Hal and the kid had been given food and sought the shelter of a near-by wall to lean against as they ate

"Understand," said Hal, "I'm not trying to butt in on your business. But if the police are after you a breadline is a poor place to hide."

"They weren't policemen,' was the answer. "That was my father and another man. They were looking for me. You see, I ran away from home when father wouldn't let me do what I wanted to do. And now I'm ashamed to go back."

Hal laughed. "Every kid wants to run away from home at some time or the other," he said

"Nearly a week," answered the other. "My money gave out and I was nearly starving. I thought I could get a job but I couldn't."

"So you see what you're up against," he added. "Take my advice and go home. And, by the way, why did you run off in the first place?"

"Father wouldn't let me get married," was the answer. "He said I wasn't old enough to know what I was doing."

WANTS TO HELP

This time Hal laughed heartily. "Well, if you ask me," he said, "I think you're father was right. About not being old enough, I mean You don't look a day over 16 to me. But I must have known there was a girl in it somewhere There usually is, when kids run away from home.

The other didn't answer and Hal again asked, "Are you going back?"

"I—I guess so," was the reply.

"There doesn't seem to be anything else to do. And, besides, I've learned that father was right. I don't want to get married. Not right away, anyway. And I'd like to help you, if I can. You see, my father sometimes uses engineers in his work. He's a contractor. You go to see him tomorrow. His name is Joshua Downing. His office is in the Continental Building. Tell him you're the man I told him about because I'll tell him tonight when I go home. Promise me you'll do it."

"Will I?" answered Hal. I'd walk there on my hands to land a job. Tell him I'll be there the first thing in the morning."

The next morning, shortly after the office of the Downing Contracting Company opened, Hal entered and asked for Mr. Downing

A moment later he was being ushered into Mr. Downing's office. He wondered if he would find the kid there. Instead, seated beside the pleasant-faced man at the desk was a pretty girl whose face seemed vaguely familiar

"Hello," said the girl. And, then, before Hal could answer, she went on. "Father," she said, "this is the engineer I was talking to you about—the one that lost his job and I did to eat in the breadline and advised me to go home and thought I was a boy and told me there's always a girl in the case when there wasn't and—"

Her father put up his hand. "Wait a minute," he said. "One thing at a time. Let me talk business first. Then you can decide which one was wrong."

They haven't decided it yet—Hal and the kid. Because whenever she tells him there wasn't a girl in the case he says,"But there was." And she pretends not to understand him. But she does.

See Boy in Your Home, Advises Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 17 years old and in love with a boy 19. I see him practically every night, and my folks object to this, although they like him very much because they think we are getting too serious. I love him very much and I would not like to lose him.

PUZZLED.

Dear Puzzled. I think the best way out of this difficulty would be for your mother, or father, to have a pleasant, friendly talk with this boy, telling him that they like him very much and are glad to have him come to see you, but that you are so young they would prefer him not to become too serious.

Tonsils a Cause of Many Colds in Winter

By Dr. R. S. COPELAND.

With the coming of spring and warm weather will come seasonal trouble. At that time most hospitals note an increase in the admission of children for removal of their tonsils and adenoids

This is not difficult to understand. During the winter children who have never suffered before from sore throats and colds may have had numerous attacks. Following these attacks they have been advised that as soon as the weather permitted their tonsils should be removed.

The custom of removing tonsils and adenoids in warm weather is a pretty good one. Then the children are less liable to colds and complications following this operation

I am often asked as to what I think of the removal of tonsils and adenoids. This operation is a common one and a simple one. If the tonsils are actually diseased as well as enlarged, they should be removed. To remove the adenoids at the same time is well, because the surgical work is in the same region.

In a recent study of over 4000 cases of children, over a period of 10 years, it was shown that this operation had more advantages than disadvantages. It was found that the removal of tonsils and adenoids favorably influenced the reduction of colds in the heads, sore throats, swelling of the neck glands, ear conditions, rheumatic diseases, diphtheria, scarlet fever, kidney diseases and tonsil infections.

All enlarged and infected tonsils should be removed. However, please do not misunderstand me. Merely because your neighbor's child has been operated on for tonsils and adenoids, is no reason for your youngster being sent to the hospital. There must be definite reasons for it in any case. It must not be done in response to a fad

SCHAAF, DORVAL CLASH FOR BASKET FUND TONIGHT

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Looking for Some Straight Stuff? Here It Is!

Pull up a chair, folks, and let's get down to brass tacks. It's time for plain talk. Plain talk sometimes is good for the soul. We're going to give it to you. Casting any airy persiflage aside and ripping away all camouflage, what kind of a battle can Ernie Schaaf and Jack Dorval be expected to put up when the gong rings in the big Christmas Fund bout of the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN in the Boston Garden, tonight? Is it going to be a rip-snorting, cockle of the heart warmy shindy that will have the fans giving an imitation of a wild night in the Psycopathic Ward? Is it going to be one of those clinching, stalling, hugging June bride affairs which would make even Granma suffer from the ennui? Is it going to be one of "those things," a prearranged affair by crooked, conniving managers, who know how safe it sometimes has proved here in Boston to "pull a barney" and then smugly sit tight a little—oh so little—while until the stench blows away?

Right off the bat we'll get one statement off our chest. That is tonight's Christmas Fund duel will be waged strictly on its merits or Messrs. Schaaf or Dorval never will pull on another glove here in the Bay State. The BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN, or any of Mr. Hearst's papers, would not stand idle and let itself be made a party to any fraud or fake. Ernie Schaaf knows that, Jack Dorval knows it and so do the managers, Johnny Buckley and Dan Carroll. That is one reason why you can rest assured that tonight's encounter will be waged strictly on its merits, that the boys will be on the "level," that everything will be strictly on the up and up. Those astute business men, Carroll and Buckley, know what it would mean to the business of boxing if anything went wrong tonight.

Another reason why there will be no "phenigling," tonight, is that both boxers and their managers have everything to win. Defeat for Schaaf means a tumble down the ladder from the runner-up position in the Heavyweight Stakes to which his bludgeoning fists have carried him. It means a loss of the fortune in front of him. Victory for Dorval means the Allegheny Woodsman will step into the coveted place in the fistic sun now occupied by the Golden Boy. Defeat for Dorval means he never again can be featured as a headliner in Boston. Inglorious defeat would consign the Allegheny Woodsman to fistic oblivion.

Now, granting and conceding that both boxers will fight as never before to win, is the fight going to be a thriller? Or will the styles of the two fail to jibe and will it be one of those tiresome, boresome bouts in which interest lags and excitement ebbs, despite the honest, strenuous efforts of the contestants to give their best? In some of his bouts Dorval failed to please. At times he showed a tendency to become discouraged when he early failed to get his man. When the going got hot he went on the defensive, concentrating on averting disaster by clinching and holding, and slowing things up by his hit-and-hold, hit-and-hold tactics. When the Wrentham Dynamiter unlimbers the Heavy Artillery, tonight, will Dorval take to the bomb-proof shelter of his arms and elbows? In the face of the Wrentham Dynamiter's whirlwind attack will the Woodsman scurry into the cyclone cellar? We don't believe he will this time, folks—we don't beleve he will! Just put yourself in Dorval's place and think what YOU would do.

Tonight's bout is Dorval's EVERYTHING. He MUST win or he's OUT. Now he's found he cannot get anywhere by fighting defensively. For weeks it has been dinned into his ears that tonight it will be a case of NOW or NEVER! He's bigger than Ernie Schaaf, heavier, of longer reach, stronger. Unless Dorval has a streak of yellow up his back six inches wide—and we don't believe he has—he'll do mighty little defensive boxing, tonight, but will concentrate on punching Mrs. Schaaf's handsome boy, Ernie, full of more holes than there are in Swiss cheese. If ever a fighter had incentive to cut loose with everything he had that incentive is in front of Jack Dorval tonight. We don't believe it is necessary for Dan Carroll to slip a blackjack in his hind pocket to remind Dorval of that incentive, should he show signs of dogging it. But considering what victory means to the Carroll stable no one would blame the former Boston cop if he did. There shouldn't be any petting and pampering of Dorval in the corner, tonight. The blackjack's whip is what is needed.

Johnny Buckley has been shouting from the rooftops that Ernie Schaaf is another Dempsey. Since the Wrentham Dynamiter started knocking 'em out of their brogans, the opinion is growing unanimous. Walk down Tremont st. and five out of any six men you ask will tell you that Ernie Schaaf comes pretty near being the best heavyweight in the ring today. Tonight we'll see if Ernie can PROVE it. Reams of nice things have been said or printed about the Golden Boy. Will Ernie make good, tonight? Will he PROVE he's another Dempsey?

Battling Levinsky was the greatest defensive fighter of the modern era. The light-heavyweight gave away pounds of weight and inches in reach and heighth to the toughest of the heavies and always went the distance. We've never seen a fighter who could and roll with the labelled haymakers like Levinsky. The great Jewish light-heavyweight was all right until he ran afoul of Jack Dempsey. Even the defensive wizardry of Levinsky failed to avail against the bludgeoning fists of the Man Killer.

Jack Dorval isn't the masterly defensive fighter Levinsky was. But he's almost as impregnable, and he's bigger, tougher, stronger. If Ernie Schaaf stops Dorval tonight he'll make good those "another Dempsey" assertions. If he fails to stow Dorval in the hay it will be shown that the Wrentham Dynamiter still has a long way to go.

Folks, we've tried to give you some plain talk on the feature bout of tonight's great Christmas Fund Show. We've tried to state the plain, unvarnished truth. If there's any mother's son of you who doesn't believe he will get a run for his money, tonight, why the only thing to do is to stay at home. But you'll find there will be few, mighty few, of the fistic regulars missing from the ringside tonight. They can smell a real fight a mile away. If there ever was a real fight, tonight's fight is IT!

LoCasio Is Victor in Title Cue Play

Carl LaCasio, in the round robin of the State amateur three cushion billiards tournament, defeated H. Davis, 30 to 16 at the 20th Century Billiard room.

Mosher President of Bellevue Club

At its annual meeting the Belevue Golf Club of Melrose elected Robert W. Mosher as president, Russell G. Brown as vice-president and George G. Dearborn as secretary and treasurer. Some improvements in the course were authorized here next spring.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

In This Corner, the Golden Boy; Over Here, the Abysmal Brute

Here they are, two striking countertypes, the Apollo-like ERNIE SCHAAF, Boston's Golden Boy, and the woodsman of the Alleghenies, JACK DORVAL, who well portrays Jack London's prize ring character, "The Abysmal Brute." Yet, strange to say, the Adonis is the slugger and the Cave Man, the boxer. Will the clever Dorval evade the TNT swings of the Wrentham Dynamiter? Dan Carroll says the herculean woodsman is going to cast boxing aside and meet Schaaf in a toe slugging match. But most experts think Dorval will revert to boxing type and try to avert a knockout by boxing skill. Can he keep the Dynamiter from hanging one on his chin? You'll get the answer when the gong clangs in the big Xmas Fund show of the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN in the Boston Garden, tonight. The fight will be one of the standout battles of the indoor season.

HOLCOMBE NEW YALE CENTER

New Haven, Nov. 19—Hillman Holcombe of Mississippi, second string center on the Yale freshman last year, was promoted to regular snapper back on the Yale team which will face Harvard at Cambridge Saturday.

Competition for the center position was renewed three weeks ago when Victor Blatin, freshman center and captain last year, broke his leg.

The coaches have tried out Bettner and Doonan, reserves last year and have found Bettner light and Doonan unsteady at passing.

Holcombe was used throughout the half hour scrimmage which marked the final football practice for the Yale first and second elevens before their departure tomorrow morning for Cambridge.

The varsity defeated the scrubs in the final practice game of the week, 6 to 0.

Capt. Albie Booth played his first football in nearly two week and was in good form. He remained in the lineup until after Levering's touchdown was registered, when Bob Lassiter replaced him.

Many Big Ringmen in St. Joe's Bouts

Many entries in the 160-pound and light heavyweight classes are expected Saturday night, when Bill Cuddy stages his weekly St. Joseph's T. A. B. amateur boxing tournament at Mechanics Building. Six open classes will be contested, 112 126 135 147 and 160 pounds and light heavies.

Many promising youngsters have been uncovered already, and the season is not yet one-quarter over.

With the annual Golden Glove series to start in a few short weeks, the amateurs should be in better shape than they have for many seasons. They are fighting at every opportunity, and each week at Mechanics there is an an overheavy entry list. Each week since the season started there has been at least 38 bouts, and there would be 45 or more but for the fact that the law demands they cease at midnight.

Munday and Gilroy Broadcast H-Y Game

The Harvard Athletic Association announced that the Harvard-Yale game at the Harvard stadium Saturday afternoon will be broadcast by two chains.

Ralph Gilroy will be at the "mike" for the Yankee network. Bill Munday will tell the play-by-play history of the encounter over the National Broadcasting Company's entire system.

U.S.G.A. Golf Ball Debate on Today

New York, Nov. 19 (INS)—At the meeting of the executive committee of the United States Golf Association today the relative merits of the "old" and "new" golf balls will be discussed in full.

It is indicated that the balloon ball" or "new" one will be ruled out, to be replaced by spheres of the same diameter—1.68, but of the weight of the "old" ball, 1.62 ounces.

If accepted, the "newest" ball will amount to a compromise on the part of the committee. This pellet still will offer a larger target to hit at than one of other days, but the added weight will displace the buoyancy and make it ride more accurately in the wind.

No "Annie Oakleys" for Army-Navy Game

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Newspapermen in the working press section will be the only onlookers not required to pay for their tickets to the Army-Navy football game for the benefit of the unemployed, at the Yankee Stadium, Dec. 12.

Army officials made this announcement today after returning from a conference with Navy men in Washington, where arrangements for the charity contest were completed. No "Annie Oakleys" will be distributed otherwise even for officials or invited guests.

Wins Over Strong Foes on Records of Schaaf, Dorval

The records of Ernie Schaaf and Jack Dorval speak for themselves. Under the influence of Jack Sharkey, Schaaf has made himself a national heavy entry list. Each week since the season started there has been at least 38 bouts, and there would be 45 or more but for the fact that the law demands they cease at midnight.

In his encounter with Max Baer, Ernie weathered his terrific punches and had him hanging on at the finish. His K. Os. of Dick Daniels, Vittorio Campolo and Jim Maloney did more to bring Schaaf up with the topnotchers than any other fights.

Dorval has a great string of victories. He defeated Otto von Porat in Chicago and the Reiche he gave Babe Hunt after that baby had edged over Schaaf made him look even better. His K. Os. of Geo. Cook, Rattle Hansen, Pierre Charles and Benny Touchstone showed he could hit as well as box.

Donie Bush to Stay in Big Leagues

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—Donie Bush, erstwhile manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Chicago White Sox, may pilot another major league club next season.

The fiery little Irishman was offered the managership of the Minneapolis club of the American Association yesterday, but as he had two managerial offers from major league clubs which he desired to consider first

He refused to divulge the offers although one was reputed to have been made by Detroit, where he started in his playing days.

OPERATE ON SOCKS SEIBOLD

Allentown, Pa., Nov. 19 (AP)—Harry "Socks" Seibold, Boston National League pitcher, will be operated on tomorrow morning for appendicitis in the Sacred Heart Hospital here.

Seibold got off to a very good start last season, but after eight weeks of the regular season suffered attacks of illness that were blamed on a diseased appendix. He decided on tomorrow's operation so as to have plenty of time to recuperate before the opening of the 1933 season.

Seibold and wife are spending the winter at her parents' home in Northampton, nine miles north of this city.

Millstreams Face Hull Sunday

The Park Department Football League features an inter-conference contest Sunday in which the Millstreams, leaders of the Western conference, and the Hull Knights, leaders of the East Boston conference, battle at Franklin Field.

The Millstreams are leading their loop with six victories, one tie and no defeats for a total of 13 points. The Hull Knights have a total of 10 points for four victories and two ties.

Another battle which will attract attention on Sunday's schedule is the tilt between the Armstrong A. A. and Lady of Lourdes at Ronan Park.

Other contests Sunday are La Salle A. C. vs City Point A. C. at C. J. Lee grounds, Mission Hill vs. St. Alphonsus at Bons Stadium and Nymas vs. Roslindale Town team at Marcella st.

Ernie Schaaf against Napoleon Jack Dorval!

The Wrentham Tiger and the Allegheny woodsman are straining on invisible leashes as they wait for the sound of the gong which will send them crashing into action in their ten-round bout at the Boston Garden tonight.

Schaaf and Dorval are ready for the test. Each promises to win in a knockout in New England's Title of Ice Center.

Schaaf with knockout victories over Jim Maloney, Victorio Campolo and lesser opposition, promises to batter Dorval into submission inside of seven rounds.

Dorval with 22 straight wins to his credit, says he will add Schaaf to his list of victims. He avers he will wreck Ernie with his mighty left hand and then knock him out with his right.

Who will win tonight?

It is anybody's fight.

A single wallop is liable to decide the battle.

Schaaf greatest sensation in the boxing game, is fighting to land a match with Max Schmeling for the championship of the world. He has been ruthless as he has battered his way through the ranks of the leading contenders. He has laughed off sizzling punches, while he has barraged with fists of iron. His mighty punches have finally brought his rivals down.

Schaaf Has Ideal Physique for Ring

Ernie is 22 years of age. He carries the touch of Flaming Youth. Nature has equipped him with a splendid body. He is one of the finest physical specimens in the boxing game.

Schaaf does not believe that Schmeling, Dempsey, Dorval or any other heavyweight will be able to block his mighty forward.

Dorval, a physical giant, has never met defeat. To him Schaaf is just another fighter. He says he will sling Ernie and then tackle Jack Sharkey.

Even the famous Sharkey glare does not seem to worry Dorval. The latter has told Sharkey to save his glare until they meet in the ring. He says the Squire will need much more than his glare to win.

Dorval is built unlike Jim Maloney, who was stopped by Sharkey [illegible] He has more competition [illegible] in the ring and does not [illegible] about the outcome of a bout. This is probably due to the [illegible] he never [illegible] upon the bright side of things.

Dorval Has Idea He Is Unbeatable

In the report Dorval [illegible] the [illegible] of the Harvard football [illegible] Edgar Cayce, took charge of Dorval at Cambridge. Harvard players have an idea they are unbeatable. And so far this season they have made good.

I look for a furious battle when Schaaf and Dorval start trading blows.

Schaaf is a better puncher, also more aggressive than his rival. He also has the background of having recently licked Maloney, Campolo and Griffiths. He will also have Jack Sharkey and Johnny Buckley in his corner. Sharkey and Buckley have been particularly successful in heavyweight ventures.

Dorval, Schaaf to take desperate chances in an effort to win by a knockout. He won't give an inch of ground to Dorval. He will risk being hit in order to get [illegible] from which to take healthy [illegible] at a opponent's head and body.

Dorval Sure He Can Beat Any Heavy

There is a bit of fear in Schaaf's whole makeup. He has never been knocked off his feet in [illegible] life, which explains why he

HARVARD, YALE SQUADS WIND UP HARD WORK

ELI CAN MAKE SEASON GOOD WITH WIN

By BILL GRIMES

At the conclusion of their respective practice sessions this afternoon, Harvard and Yale will have ended their arduous preparations for the annual Crimson and Blue classic, which will be presented in the Stadium on Saturday.

For more than nine weeks Harvard and Yale have been at work readying themselves for this game.

At the start of the season, Yale's outlook was far brighter than that of the Crimson. Capt. Albie Booth's squad is composed chiefly of veterans, with just enough new material to keep the lettermen hustling to retain their berths. The Elis lost three line men in Capt Vincent, Lowery and Linehan, while Dann, McLennan and Rean were valuable backfield assets a year ago.

In the second game of the season, Yale was tipped over by Georgia, and then after chalking up a victory over the weak University of Chicago eleven, the Elis were tied by Army and Dartmouth. On the whole, the Yale season has not been a howling success.

Starting with a squad of green like candidates and a set can feet, string backfield, Harvard has gone through seven games without a defeat, and numbers among its victims Army and Dartmouth

Harvard and Yale Adopted New Attacks

Both Harvard and Yale adopted new systems this season. Head Coach Eddie Casey installed a new attack at Cambridge and Dr. Mal Stevens, the chief at New Haven decided that the Notre Dame style of play was most suitable to the Elis.

Under Eddie Casey, Harvard has regained a position in the football world it has not held since the days of the Haughton regime. It has been 13 years since a Crimson eleven faced Yale without having suffered a defeat or been held to a tie.

In Harvard-Yale games it is almost customary for one team undertook to come out with a victory firmly clinched in his teeth. In the rst, Harvard has been an odds on favorite to defeat Yale and has at

Crimson Is Slight Choice Over Blue

The Crimson is, and should be, a slight favorite based on the results of the season's play. Unless the three week lay-off made the Dartmouth game proves too much of a handicap, Yale will give Harvard a battle.

The Harvard players and also the coaches of Yale have been pointing to Saturday's game since the first practice session of the season.

Regardless of contrary statements, the success or failure of Harvard and Yale seasons are based on the outcome of their game. If the Elis should come through on Saturday, Yale will be vindicated for the setback by Georgia and the ties with Army and Dartmouth, and in the opinions of the rabid Crimson enthusiasts, Harvard's season would be a flop.

Although Yale, in the past has been guilty of entering Harvard games with such a superiority complex that it was unable to click, Harvard will not make such a fatal mistake on Saturday.

Casey Has Right Angle on Contest

Eddie Casey has seen too many better Harvard teams beaten by inferior Eli outfits to allow any overconfidence to crop up among his players. He realizes that it is going to take the best article of football Harvard can produce to beat Yale. He has not allowed himself or his players to be misled by reports from New Haven.

Coach Casey has been stressing for two days the opinions of the Dartmouth players that Yale is stronger than Harvard. The Big Green is basing its opinion of the Elis and the Crimson on the football it encountered in the Yale Bowl and the Harvard Stadium.

To the sophisticated, the dispatches credited to the Dartmouth players may sound like propaganda, but, nevertheless, Casey is using them to whip his Crimson squad into the proper mental condition to tackle Yale.

Harvard and Yale wind up their practice today. They will hold light signal drills tomorrow, but the contest work is over and they are waiting for the whistle. The Yale squad is due here tomorrow noon and will practice in the Stadium, but before the arrival of the Elis in the Allston area, the Crimson have written finis on the 1931 preparatory season.

New Irish Plays Ready for U. S. C. Invasion

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 19 (US)—A snappy offensive drill, in which a team that will start against the University of Southern California worked effectively, terminated practice, the final stiff session Notre Dame will have listed before the game Saturday afternoon.

In this period, which was dominated by some new plays that have been under cover so far this season, newspapermen who were permitted to view the proceedings were given a treat.

They saw almost perfect execution of several "new ones" which Coach Anderson has had in his bag of tricks and which he will throw at the determined Trojans. The first team, the one that has been getting the call at the start of practically every game, was made up of DeVore and Koskiewicz; Culver and Kurth, tackles; Hoffman and Harris, guards; Yarr, center; Banas at full, Schwartz at left half, Shoekstick at right half and Jaskwhich at quarterback.

7 MEN RULED OFF RACE TRACK

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 19 (AP)—A long investigation, which began October 3, when it was discovered that a "ringer" had run and won a race at Havre de Grace, has resulted in the ruling off of Maryland race tracks for life of seven men and three horses. Among the seven was "Nigger Nate" Raymond, known as a gambler for large stakes.

At Havre de Grace a horse named Shem was entered in a juvenile race, but Akhaiton, a three-year-old colt, ran under that name and won by a wide margin. The discovery of the substitution led to the drastic action taken yesterday by the Maryland Racing Commission.

In addition to Raymond, who, the commission's announcement said, figured in the fixing of the race under the name of A. Ray, Herman Brackenhammer; Leo Hanahan; Patrick Christie, alias Peter Westley, alias Charles Hall; William Marino, in whose name "Shem" ran at Havre De Grace; Vladmar Sulick and Julius Deloit, who, under the name of J. Lebolt, won "Akhaiton" at Aqueduct September 17. The license of Arthur Kennedy, trainer of the horse that ran as "Shem," was revoked not because he was connected with fixing the race, but because he accepted the horse without properly identifying the owner of the horse and because he saddled a three-year-old colt when the horse entered was a two-year-old gelding.

Three horses, Shem, Akhaiton and Ep, which were shipped from New York together, were barred.

By JOE CASHMAN

The Bruins leave at noon for New York where they will tackle Lee Patrick's Rangers on Madison Square Garden ice this evening in their third start of the year.

The Rossmen will stay over in the "Big Town" until tomorrow night, when they will leave for Montreal for their game with the world's champion Les Canadiens at the Forum on Saturday evening.

The showing of the Bruins against the Falcons convinced Manager Art Ross that several of his charges are far from being in the best of shape as yet, and he would have liked to put his squad through a long workout at the Garden yesterday, but absence of ice prevented it. The playing surface was removed immediately after the game to make the Garden ready for the Schaaf-Dorval fight tonight.

Visiting clubs can now dress for games at the Garden. The quarters for the visitors used to be so small that most of the teams dressed at their hotel, but this year a room as large and as well equipped as the Bruins' clubhouse has been set aside for the hostile sextets.

The new system of officiating in vogue this season is great. Each referee takes care of half the ice with the result that one or the other sees everything that takes place and that rough stuff in the rear which escaped unnoticed when both officials kept up with the puck is now caught.

And while on the subject of officiating, it is safe to say that no team of referees that ever worked a Boston game did a better job than Bill Stewart and Red Synott, two local prides, in the Bruins-Falcons encounter. Incidentally, it was the first time that two American referees had ever worked together.

The fans at the opening game came prepared to cheer the Bruins' newcomers and remained to cheer the veterans. The youngsters all looked good but by far the best work of the evening was done by Harry Oliver and Perk Galbraith, the oldest of the native forwards, in combination with Marty Barry at center.

Springfield Five Cancels Trip

Springfield, Nov. 18 (AP)—H. S. Degrost, faculty manager of athletics at Springfield College, tonight announced that Lafayette has cancelled its scheduled basketball game here on January 14. Inability to make arrangements with enough opponents in this section to underwrite the trip forced the cancellation.

ALBIE'S RUNNING MATE

We see by the papers that Albie Booth is going to be a thorn in John Harvard's side, Saturday. They're not saying so much about BOB PARKER. But Bob is likely to speak for himself. Recall Bob's 93-yard runback of that Army kickoff? Look out for him John! He's a combination of a corkscrew and greased pig with a dash of greyhound thrown in for good measure. He has an educated toe, besides.

Notre Dame Man Due to Be Yale Grid Coach

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 19 (INS)—Signals were being called here today for a general shift play in the Yale athletic coaching lineup. Reliable, but unofficial, reports were that Dr. Marvin A. Stevens, head football coach, will wave goodbye to his job at the close of the present season, that a Notre Dame man will be installed in Stevens' place, and that other changes all along the line will be effected before Christmas comes.

Silence on coaching changes prevailed at the university today as it has throughout the football season while vague rumors have made the rounds. Rumors were flying more thickly and faster today. One which could not be verified was that Capt. Albie Booth, variously known as the mighty atom and potent pygmy, will join the coaching staff in an assistant capacity.

Most available information was that Adam Walsh, former Notre Dame star and present line coach at Yale, will ascend to the head coach position, or that another Notre Dame man not now on the Yale staff but who has made a success of coaching elsewhere will be named if the Walsh appointment does not materialize Stevens, whose contract expires this year, will quit football to practice medicine.

Just who are the other coaches due to leave Yale will probably not be irrevocably known until formal announcement is made by the Athletic Board of Control. It was no secret, however, that End Coach Charlie Comerford is winding up what will probably be his seventh season, and today came the report that Pat Osborn, freshman mentor, will also resign, and will be succeeded by Reginald D. Root, former varsity lineman, now one of the assistants at the Bonesmen.

There had been some talk earlier in the season that Root would succeed Stevens but the big blonde lineman who introduced football to Mexico now appears definitely out of the head coaching picture.

The situation is complicated by the fact that assistant coaches are generally chosen at Yale by or on recomendation of the head coach, and Stevens' decision to mak something of his M. D. degree will leave the ultimate organization largely in the hands of Adam Walsh or whoever steps into Stevens' shoes.

CUT SALARIES IN MINORS

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—The opening shot of the long-feared campaign to trim baseball salaries has been fired on the American Association front.

Taking the initiative of the movement, club owners of the association today considered one of the most drastic wage cuts in years.

Under the present American Association proposal, the player salary would be limited to a maximum of $600 monthly, for years scores of former major leaguers roamed around the Class AA League with salaries close to the ones they received for big-time baseball.

Such a drastic wage reduction undoubtedly would end the playing days of major league castoffs in short order, as most of them refuse to continue in the game for much less than they received in the majors.

Thomas Jefferson Hickey still held the presidential seat of the American Association today, victor of another fight to oust him. When the balloting became a hopeless 4-to-4 deadlock after two days, the club owners voted unanimously to give him a one year's contract as they did a year ago.

Yale Coaches Say 'H' Mentors Afraid

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 19 (INS)—"Harvard's afraid to meet Yale."

So said Head Coach Mal Stevens. The Yale coaching staff issued a challenge to the Harvard staff for a game to precede the varsity contest on Saturday.

The Cambridge men refused. Said the Yale Daily News today:

"When asked why, they muttered about how busy they would be and how little practice they have had."

Coach Stevens will issue a second challenge, for a game to be played on Thanksgiving Day, immediately after a big dinner.

Dorval, too, is without fear. He has never tasted defeat, and feels he can lick any heavyweight in the world.

I think Dorval's chances of victory depend upon his outscoring Schaaf. I don't believe Jack will be able to stop Ernie, though, of course, no heavyweight is knockout proof.

Dorval's best chances are on winning the decision at the end of 15 rounds. In a 15-round bout, I think Schaaf would wear Jack down, but over the 10-round route Dorval has an opportunity to grab the decision.

With the show being promoted for the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American, New England fans have given it tremendous support.

The fact 15,000 seats are on sale at $1 and $2 has also made a strong appeal to the fans.

The tremendous seating capacity of the Garden will enable all who wish to see the show.

In addition to the $1 and $2 seats, there are also seats at $3. That is the top price.

Fight Tonight Is Ring Bargain

This is the greatest fistic bargain ever offered the fans anywhere in the sensational of eight rounds. This should be a punching duel.

Joe Barlow of Dorchester and Jack Kelley of Waterbury, Ct., should also furnish action when they meet over the six-round route.

The four rounders are first class attractions. Johnny Dixon of Norwood mingles with Frankie Firpo of Providence, Tom McNeeley of Cambridge takes on Dan Reagan of Gardner, Jack Polison of New York opposes Henry Surette of Leominster, while Steve Ketchel of Lawrence will punch it out with Charley Kelley of Newton.

Martin Refuses to Run for President

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 19 (AP)—Gene Martin, manager and president-secretary of the New Haven Baseball club, today withdrew as a candidate for the presidency of the Eastern League. He announced at the same time he would support the candidacy of Robert C. Wilson, New Haven newspaperman and former business manager of the Hartford Club.

The presidency is also sought by Fred Voss, Jr., president of the Bridgeport Bears and chairman of the league's executive committee.

Bancroft Likely to Stay With Giants

New York, Nov. 18 (US)—A report that Dave Bancroft, John McGraw's first lieutenant on the New York Giants, would manage the Pittsburgh Pirates next season was not taken seriously here today.

Bancroft is receiving a good salary with the Giants and is well satisfied with his job. It is not believed he would welcome a change.

Vermont Gridmen Get Light Session

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 19—The University of Vermont football team had a light session with signal drill.

All are in good shape for the Springfield contest, Bedell, halfback, is fit and Bowers and Manning are improved to the point where they can last through an entire contest.

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

The Schaaf-Dorval bout at the Boston Garden tonight has got the fans by the well known ears.

It should be a terrific battle. Schaaf and Dorval are physical giants and can hit.

The fact Dorval hasn't been beaten in 22 starts has caused a lot of wise money to go down on him.

Schaaf has been blazing a trail in the direction of the heavyweight championship of the world. He has been the sensation of the boxing world since he went under the management of Jack Sharkey and Johnny Buckley.

Mr. Boston

Dick Dunn made a popular move when he placed 15,000 seats for tonight's bout on sale at $1 and $2. This is the greatest break New England boxing fans ever received.

The Garden can care for 21,000 fans at a big bout. This assures all who can an opportunity to see Schaaf and Dorval in action.

The top price of tickets is only $3. Those 15,000 seats at $1 and $2, however, are the ones which caused fight fans to vote Dick Dunn the most popular man in town.

I think boxing would boom in all parts of the country if the promoters forgot about asking grand opera prices until after the depression.

Notables in all walks of life will be at the ringside when Schaaf and Dorval breeze into action. There isn't anything like a heavyweight bout to bring out the fans.

A win for Schaaf will send him into the ring with Young Stribling.

Will the Sbvs try to win by knockouts? You bet they will.

Dan Carroll, Charley Turner and Harveyboy Finnegan will tell Dorval how to do it once the gong sounds.

For judges the commission will make its pick from Frances Rowman, Jim Dunn, Johnnyboy, Billy McMinimen, Dave Nalligan, Johnny Glacken and Tom Brady.

I'll be right down against the ring when the big punches breeze in. I couldn't miss this great show for anything.

Come early, and remember there will be room for everybody. The Garden is a big place.

FITTON AERIAL ATTACK GOOD

Pere Marquette has a high grade forward pass combination, with Al Weston doing the most of the passing, but the Fittons also are good in the air. Fittons play the Peres for the New England semipro championship, Sunday, at Braves Field.

Fatt Elkins of the Fittons can match Weston for accuracy and distance. That big Indian can heave the oval very well.

Fittons have a couple of good receivers in Maddy Savior, former Harvard star; Bud Dower, at Boston College in recent years; Bud Hafferty, one time Boston College end, and Rusty Yarnell, who can take 'em, or toss 'em.

B. C. PERFECTS NEW PLAYS FOR H. C. GAME

EAGLES DRILL IN SECRET AT HEIGHTS

Boston College today closed Alumni Field to everyone but the members of the varsity football squad. Hereafter, and until the Holy Cross game on Thanksgiving Day the Maroon and Gold squad will practice in secrecy.

Acting on orders from the athletic office, a host of managers patrolled the entrances to the athletic field at the Heights yesterday afternoon and the same procedure is expected to be followed for the rest of the week.

With only a few more days left to prepare the Maroon and Gold squad for its annual game with the Crusaders and with a contest with Boston University intervening on Saturday, the B. C. coaches feel that they have little enough time in which to accomplish the task ahead of them.

McKenney and his fellow strategists at B. C. have prepared new plays for the Holy Cross game.

After watching Harvard's lateals score the only touchdown made against the Purple McKenney believes that he has found the most effective weapon he can use against the Crusaders, who will undoubtedly present a much stronger rush line, man for man, that the Eagles

McKenney announced definitely yesterday that the second string lineup with but a few changes will start against Boston University. Charley Calfory, returned cripple, will be at halfback. Joe Ryder replaces Hugo Harrington at the other halfback post and Junior Cormier, Brighton high star and the finest drop kicker at the Heights will start at left end in place of Freddie Mercy.

Capt. Joe Kelley, Eagle fullback, had his first practice workout at the Heights yesterday when he ran through a dummy scrimmage and a long signal drill with the varsity. Kelley will lead the varsity through one period of play against the Terriers Saturday.

Terriers Lose Veteran Tackle for B. C. Clash

Boston University will enter Saturday's game with Boston College minus the services of its veteran tackle, Charlie Dennin, of Arlington. "Chuck" will be the only regular Terrier out of the lineup.

It was hoped that Dennin's shoulder would respond to treatments sufficiently to allow him to play today, as he is a veteran of two years' experience.

The Arlington boy has played a consistent game at tackle all year and he will be missed Saturday. Leo Silton, a sophomore, will start in his place. Silton weighs 200 pounds and should develop into a star next year but at present he lacks experience.

Just to give you an idea of how impossible it is. Reading from top to bottom, Dino Grandi, Italy's foreign minister, and President Hoover alternate in the dialogue

"Mr. Hoover, I can't go back to Italy and face my premier unless I get it. I'll give anything . . .

"I am sorry, Signor. I am afraid it cannot be done."

"I am authorized, Mr. Hoover, to say that Italy will scrap six battleships cut down army expenses . . . ."

"That is a generous offer, but yet, I am afraid . . .

"I don't like to discourage you, Signor, but you see, it's like this. There are already 150,000 persons who would give anything they possess to . . .

"I know, Mr. Hoover, but don't you understand that it must be done somehow? We will pay 100 million lira down, and the rest in 90 days. There must be some way. Can't you try?"

"Mr. Grandi, it has been tried before, but I think without success. You see, it is an American tradition. It is dignified by a crown of eighteen years. It is, I may say . . .

"Mr. Hoover, I'll even recall Prime Carnera if you can only . . ."

"I am very sorry, Mr. Grandi. All the wealth of the Indies, all the gold in the bank of France; all the rice in China could not get it. I absolutely, finally, at once and forever assure you, I cannot get you a ticket on the 50-yard line for the Harvard-Yale game.

"I am so sorry, Mr. Hoover, I shall have to now see George . . ."

CUBS TACKLE EAGLES ON SATURDAY

The Canadian-American league swings into Boston stride Saturday night at the Boston Garden when the Bruins Cubs tackle the tough New Haven Eagles.

Six leagues in professional hockey and this includes the major circuit furnishes more rough and thrilling hockey than the Can-Am loop.

President Francis Ouimet, Vice-president Art Ross and Manager Eddie Powers have decided to follow the policy of giving the fans what they want. The result has been several additions of men noted as rough players.

The Cubs will be ready for the Eagles.

Brown Plays Two Hard Games in Six Days

Providence, Nov. 19—The Brown Bear is sharpening his claws to repel two invasions in six days, University of New Hampshire, Saturday, and on the following Thursday, Colgate.

The traditional Thanksgiving Day encounter with the Colgate Maroons, one of the country's high-powered elevens, is the big fray.

The clash with the Wildcats from Durham N. H., is regarded of great importance, as the Bears cannot afford to let down for a moment in this affair, once regarded as a breather.

While Colgate has already commenced preparations for the Brown game, the Bears must risk injuries Saturday. Brown is eager to avenge last years 7-0 setback by New Hampshire.

Last autumn Brown entered the New Hampshire game beaten only by Yale, tied by Syracuse and victorious over Columbia, Holy Cross, Princeton, Tufts, Rhode Island and Worcester Tech. New Hampshire, on the other hand, was weak.

Coach Tuss McLaughry started his second-stringers against the Granite Staters, but after New Hampshire had secured a 7-0 lead, the Brown regulars went into action, but the Wildcats repelled every thrust at their goal.

New Hampshire has an improved record this year while Brown has failed to do quite as well as last year from the standpoint of major victories.

New Hampshire walloped Springfield, 26-13, last Saturday, while Brown was being nosed out, 9-7, by Columbia.

ALL MORTGAGE CHARGES NOT UNREASONABLE

By B. C. FORBES

FAIR'S FAIR. So much is written about the terrific costs incidental to obtaining a mortgage that I feel impelled to relate my own experience, especially as criticisms have been given space in this column.

I consider the charges not exorbitant. I'll give you the facts and leave you to judge.

A banker friend to whom I mentioned that I was thinking of taking out a mortgage suggested that I get in touch with a leading New York insurance company. I wrote on September 1 and promptly received an application blank. Within a week the filled-in form was mailed. An appraiser was sent and on September 18 I was informed:

"Subject to the conditions, title, etc., being found satisfactory I beg to advise you that our finance committee at its meeting yesterday authorized a loan of $150,000 for three years, with interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum . . .

"Upon receipt of advice from you, I will be pleased to notify our general counsel of the authorization and he will communicate with you with reference to the terms and conditions of the closing."

Insurance and Survey Cost $206

Next came, on September 23, this communication from a Jersey title insurance company:

"We have been advised that a loan in the amount of $17,500, secured by a first mortgage upon property owned by you, has been submitted to us. They have referred the matter of title examination and insurance, and survey to us. Our charge for this examination and, if found insurable, issuing a policy of title insurance to the New York Life Insurance Company in the sum of $17,500, will be $162. The cost of a survey will be $44.

"We enclose herewith our form of application blank which we ask that you fill out as completely as possible and return to us, together with a check for one-half of our fees as above quoted, to comply with a rule of this company."

Incidental Expenses Only $10

I replied that, as I had in apple-pie order all papers connected with the property, I didn't want a survey made or to incur a single expense other than absolutely necessary to obtain the mortgage.

I was informed that a survey was essential.

As I did not hear anything further for a fortnight, I asked the life insurance company the reason for the delay, and received a courteous reply that the matter would be investigated at once.

A few days later I received a bill for $3.85 for incidentals connected with officially recording certain papers, an entirely warranted charge and not really part of the cost. Next came a bill for $4 for recording the new mortgage.

The closing was effected on November 6, when I paid the following bill:

Examination of plot	$162.00
Survey of property	44.00
Drawing bond and mortgage	10.00
Total	$216.00

This works out at just under 6½ per cent. Per the money, surely not unreasonable under current financial conditions

Good Points in Hoover Plan

Out of all the various proposals now afoot to furnish responsible financing of home-building, it is to be hoped that something practical will be evolved, applicable on a very wide scale.

President Hoover's plan, though still somewhat vague, may be made feasible. One important insurance company has built up a rather large and quite profitable small-mortgage business, coupling it with the insuring of the borrower.

Joseph P. Day, the dynamic New York real estate magnate, is now striving to bring together financial, real estate, building and supply interests for the purpose of forming an organization to finance home-building, also with the insurance feature attached. Where the mortgage takes out life insurance covering the sum borrowed, the transaction is invested with an additional attraction for wealthy insurance companies.

All indications are that something tangible will be achieved.

That many observers are convinced that the market is gradually working toward an oversold condition. Purchase of shares in selected brackets is still suggested and justified by the demonstrated ability of the shares concerned to disappear from the tape during periods of selling.

The Motors

When measuring the extent of the decline it is well to remember that the motors have had nearly 3 years on the downside in comparison with 2 years for the rest of the list, excepting the oils. Now only have the motors been deflated marketwise, they have been thoroughly deflated businesswise. Inventories are down sharply and costs are under absolute control. Every reliable indicator of strength ens the belief that a better demand and this does not mean a return to the boom days but a steady trend with consequent production expansion, would start a stream of mighty cheerful items from the mid-west.

Analyzing the present business outlook, earnings status, return and price to earnings ratio of General Motors and General Electric leads a prominent writer to the conclusion it is advisable to switch from the latter into the former.

Bear Operations

Since the stock exchange ruling on short sales became operative there has been considerable speculation regarding the status of former bear leaders. To say these professionals are definitely at work is impossible, since few outside their intimates could trace their operations. There are, however, certain surface indications that create the impression some bear pools are active. It does not seem that selling against the box would force the loaning of so many stock market leaders at a premium. Also the readiness with which shares are offered on strength would appear to be confined, at least in part, by influences other than necessitous liquidation.

As for the rumors about the bears, there are many. Perhaps the most impressive is that one stock attributes some of the pressure on the carriers to a former leader of the downside forces

Boardroom Briefs

It is said that of all the groups the utilities are currently in the most vulnerable position. . . A broker understands that there is enough selling overhanging in Baltimore & Ohio to force the price into the low twenties . . . Recent weakness was utilized for the accumulation of more shares by insiders who are impressed by the character of trade reports . . . Chrysler, Nash and Studebaker are motors also suggested for market leaders at setbacks . . . The short interest in Central is said to be unwieldy and traders are advised to look elsewhere if they are inclined to put out a short line . . .

CIGARETTE TAX BIG BURDEN ON COMPANIES

By FRANK H. MELOON

Timely study just issued by Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company shows what a big burden is imposed on tobacco companies, and also on consumers by the mounting cigarette taxes. It has been protested that excessive taxation is putting many persons in the position of working more for the government than for stockholders. The survey shows 13 States now tax nearly 3 cents on the cigarette tax and only 10 have not yet considered it. Receipts taxed by the states run into the millions, but the federal tax is the great one.

Liggetts & Myers' study shows that all the big cigarette manufacturers have substantial incomes from other tobacco sources than cigarettes, but their total incomes have receded by more than 25 per cent of the federal tax on cigarettes alone. Here is the record for the last four years:

Year	Total income	Federal cigarette tax
1930	$193,167,417	$345,810,254
1929	242,787,906	360,000,000
1928	76,413,600	301,255,800
1927	75,837,648	278,878,864

These taxes are in addition, of course, to the 12½ per cent corporate tax which each of the companies pays the federal government.

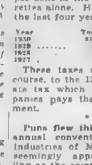
Puns flew thick and fast at the annual convention of Associated Industries of Massachusetts, somewhat seemingly appreciated as sparkling as the scintillating chandeliers of the grand ball room of the Copley-Plaza, where they always are held forth. The outgoing president was Benjamin A. Frankfurt, industrial executive and writer of great ability. The incoming president was Frank H. Willard, energetic head of the Graton & Knight Co. of Worcester.



Frank H. Willard

An orator remarked that Associated Industries should travel fast with the combination of a Franklin (auto) and a Willard (battery). In an odd coincidence, Mr. Willard's Worcester address happens to be Franklin at, but that wasn't brought out at the convention. Starting as an errand boy with Graton & Knight at 17, back in the 80's, Mr. Willard worked his way to the presidency.

Rails are holding the centre of the financial stage. Ralph Budd, leaving the Great Northern to head the Burlington, says:

"Depression is having two important influences working toward consolidation. In first place, it is calling attention to great importance of operating economies, in second place, order of Interstate Commerce Commission requiring railroads to work out plans for adding weaker lines shows that commission looks on railroads as national system."

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Rails Stiffen as Leaders Congregate

Stiffening of the rail shares today took place simultaneously with the calling together of an important meeting of rail chiefs and labor leaders in New York. It was expected that a basis of agreement relative to a scaling down of operating costs on the rail lines might follow the meeting. Steven's rally was a feature of the rails, along with New York Central's.

American Sugar's Interest Savings

Position of American Sugar Refining common stock has been strengthened in the past as a result of the debt retirement plans of the management, which have been carried out steadily. On January 1 the company will retire another $3,500,000 of its 6 per cent bonds, leaving only $7,873,000 outstanding. The original issue was $30,000,000. Including the bonds to be retired, the management has caused a saving of more than $1,320,000 in annual interest charges, which is equal to $2.95 a share on the outstanding stock.

Liquidation in Radio Corp. Seen

Liquidation has featured Radio recently. In addition to selling for the purpose of strengthening weak long positions, there has been a supply in the stock on account of the government agitation against some of the practices of the company. Liquidation also was the result of weakness in Radio-Keith on the new financing plans, which will affect Radio because of its interest in that company.

SPECTATOR

Says:

The less comment one makes on the market nowadays, the less chance is there to err. Still, when one gives attention to the turn of affairs in the commodity situation, the reason for recent sharp break in stocks is not hard to understand. For, if the market found it difficult to negotiate any headway when individual commodities boomed, such as wheat the other day, then certainly on an occasion when wheat, cotton, copper, silver and other commodities were reactionary, the incentive to push forward is lacking.

Uppermost Question

The question uppermost in every investor's mind is "how soon will the decline be terminated and?" It is not particularly important whether the market is going to turn upward for another brief rallying spell, but it certainly is of vital interest to us as stocks reach a point where they can ignore outside developments and hold anchor while forces working for betterment gradually assert themselves.

Chartwise, the market outlook for the next day or so is not particularly encouraging. However, after one has gone through the mill of experience with chart prognostications for the past month or so, they have probably been long discarded.

Rail Incentive

The rails still remain the focal point of the market's fluctuations. The probability of some constructive news will be forthcoming from today's conference between rail executives and shipperboards may provide the necessary incentive for worthwhile price improvement.

The explaining away of the market decline after little balm to stockholders who have patiently held on in their holdings in the hope that a solid bottom had already been reached some time ago.

STOCKS SHOW BETTER TONE IN WALL ST.

New York, Nov. 19—Stocks showed a better ton in Wall Street trading today after early selling had been absorbed.

Although some individual issues in both stocks and bonds were depressed to new lows for the major bear market, nevertheless, price averages indicate that roughly half of the extreme recovery from Oct. 5 low is still retained.

UNION PACIFIC RALLIES

Rails were heavy at the start, with the exception of New York Central, which showed isolated strength, eventually rising about 2 points, along with Atchison and Union Pacific. The last named sold off 2 to a new low since 1903, before turning upward.

Atlantic Coast Line, a lightly traded issue, dropped 7 to a price of 50, on reduction of the dividend.

By early afternoon, net gains of a point or two appeared in many issues as U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, Union Carbide and Eastman Kodak.

Better tone in commodities helped the security markets. Such adverse dividend news as appeared was so lacking in an element of surprise that it had little influence. Atlantic Coast Line reduced its semi-annual payment to $2 from $3.50. Omission by Chicago & Northwestern and a reduction by Southern Pacific yesterday had been anticipated.

Railroad quarters were absorbed with rumors of possible developments from the conference of railroad executives and labor heads. Rumors in brokerage offices of a surprise voluntary reduction in wages may have prompted considerable short covering and contributed to the upturn in the carrier issues.

On the whole, however, Wall Street did not seem impressed with such gossip and expected little or nothing in the way of immediate developments.

QUESTION BEAR SELLING

Selling such as has recently poured into the stock market has aroused discussion of the stock exchange's control of short selling. So far as can be learned, the exchange officials are maintaining about as rigid a control over the shorts as ever, but the short interest appears to have been considerably increased.

This, of course, should strengthen the market's technical position, but may have contributed to the recent decline. Closing of a short account must still be so designated as they go to the floor and the exchange today ordered publication to include odd lot transactions once more in their daily reports of short sales.

Bond offering of $12,000,000 for the Cincinnati Union Terminal Co., the first railroad offering in two months, aroused hopes of a restoration of a ready market for railway bonds, and for bonds generally.

In view of the fact that this issue has the backing of seven roads including the leading eastern trunk lines, it could scarcely be regarded as a test of the market for ordinary carrier obligations.

Bankers to Meet in West Virginia

The 1932 spring meeting of the executive council, American Bankers' Association, will be held at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 25 to 27 inclusive.

The special trains, which will bring about 300 bankers and members of their families to the meeting, will arrive at White Sulphur April 24.

The 1932 meeting will be one day shorter than usual, ending with the "family dinner" Wednesday, April 27.

Borg Warner Corp. Sees Some Pick-Up

Chicago, Nov. 19—President Davis of Borg-Warner Corp. declares some pick-up is taking place as result of new models being brought out by various automobile companies. Present indications are that both November and December will be better months for the corporation, from point of view of automobile production, hit a low point for some time.

Deere Operations Show an Increase

Chicago, Nov. 19—Resuming of operations by Deere & Co. is in line with the usual autumn increase in the farm equipment industry. Stepping up of production is understood to be for the purpose of rounding out its spring implement line. Cash position has been bolstered by payments of Soviet October-November acceptances.

Coastwise Ships' Cargoes Doubled

New York, Nov. 19—Ship lines operating in coastwise trade have made "remarkable progress," says the annual report of W. P. Levis, vice-president and freight traffic manager of Clyde-Mallory lines. Volume of freight carried by lines' ships during the season of 1930-31 was over 30 times volume of previous year in some classes, and as a whole was more than double.

Public Service Co. Net Income Higher

HONEST, I FEEL FINE —'COURSE, SITTING UP AIN'T AS NICE AS WALKING AROUND — BUT IT'S LOTS BETTER THAN LAYING IN BED — THINKIN' MAYBE YOU'RE GONNA DIE
PEOPLE WALKING AROUND THE STREETS DON'T KNOW HOW LUCKY THEY ARE JUST BECAUSE THEY'RE ABLE TO WALK AROUND THE STREETS!
I DIDN'T KNOW — BUT I DO NOW — AFTER I'M ALL WELL — I'LL TRY AN' REMEMBER ALL THE POOR PEOPLE IN HOSPITALS, AN' IF I HAPPEN TO GET SOME TOUGH BREAKS — I'LL BETCHA I WON'T START SQUAWKIN' 'BOUT MY HARD LUCK!

COOK-COOS

"Under modern conditions," says American Unitarian Association, "the family must be established upon purely democratic basis."

Equal rights might be quite satisfactory for family life—if members weren't capable of making unequal amounts of noise.

And the thing that gives way first in a democratic family is the vote power.

"My idea of wasted effort," says Genevieve the kitchen cynic, "is straining your ears to catch what a musical comedy chorus is singing."

Milestones on the path to higher education—

LAFAYETTE, Ind.—Students in classes under Prof. H. M. Jacklin, at Purdue University, sit on seats fitted with different types of upholstery. They are then given a ten-minute shaking, the equivalent of riding 50 miles in an automobile over rough roads, in order to discover the relative merit of various kinds of upholstery.

* * *

It will certainly make a lot of parents feel better to know that their collegiate sons have received a good shaking.

* * *

Perhaps the chief trouble nowadays is that the only shaking parents do is with a cocktail shaker.

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Belle: Weren't those your tonsils I saw preserved in alcohol at the State Fair?

—ANXIOUS.

Another way to make a blonde heart is to tell her how to use it.

ROMANCE OF THE BUSINESS WORLD

They laughed when Genifico Donkes sat around the house all day flicking cigar and cigarette ashes on the rugs. They howled when he flicked ashes in his coat pocket. But now their jeers have turned to loud hip hip hoorays because Bonifico was experimenting with a mixture of tonceeo and moth balls—and he has produced an ash which, when flicked, moth-proofs the rugs.

Scientist Finds Baby Ape's Growth Faster Than Child

Dr. C. F. Jacobsen, instructor in the department of psychobiology at Yale, has brought up this ape infant from the moment of her birth. In study how a developing ape compares with a human baby.

Dr. Jacobsen, who had disclosed the first report on his observations concerning this young ape at the National Academy of Science yesterday, has amplified his statement. He said:

"In the first three months her weight doubled, in six months it was three times as much as at birth. The growth of teeth also was faster than of a human child of the same age. At three months the chimpanzee grew as much as a human baby at ten months of age. At the end of the 12 months, our female chimpanzee had the physical development of a human child of three years.

"The most important thing is that a chimpanzee of this early age is far more independent and active than a corresponding human.

"In behavior of psychic growth also the ape beat the human child in the first year of life."

Mrs. Margaret Burns, 72 Washington St., Somerville, Mass., says: "At the age of 70 I started suffering from rheumatism. Since then I have suffered from this dreadful disease, my left hip pained me greatly, especially at night when the pain kept me awake. I had been treated for it but got no relief until Mr. Reilly told me to try Rheumatic Tea. I have obtained relief from pains in his shoulder, my left hip and my left knee is improved. Acting upon Mr. Reilly's advice I had a bottle sent to my home and it has helped me so much that I am glad to tell others suffering from it to give it a trial and they obtain relief from their suffering."—Signed, Margaret Burns.

Country Wants the Whole Truth About the Navy

Referring to the admission by Admiral Pratt, chief of naval operations, that the administration had no intention to building our navy up to the limit fixed in the London naval treaty, we expressed the opinion that "the country would like to hear from other naval officers."

This wish has been promptly, and, we may add, impressively met by a former lieutenant of the United States Navy, Mr. K. C. Hawkins. His article, entitled "Shall the Navy Rust?," in the New York Herald Tribune, explains just what such terms as "reserve commission," "inactive reserve," "de-commissioning" and "rotation" mean, as applied to the vessels of our navy.

It will be remembered that the President, in announcing a $59,000,000 reduction in the naval budget, issued a statement that this decrease would not reduce by a single man the personnel of the navy; that it provided for the construction of combatant ships at a rate double that of Great Britain, and did not involve the "de-commissioning" of any fighting ship.

This seemed a remarkable achievement. To reduce, to the extent of 15 per cent, the appropriation asked by the navy for the approaching fiscal year, and, at the same time, to maintain, at a seeming maximum, every element in the navy's effectiveness, suggested the miracle worker.

Mr. Hawkins reminds us, however, that the navy's effectiveness, not as a potentiality on paper, but as a weapon of war, is the only reason for its existence, and he brings sharply before us the question as to whether economies achieved by laying up ships may not prove in the long run a most wasteful form of extravagance.

There are three ways in which naval vessels are taken out of the category of effective units.

They may be place in "RESERVE COMMISSION"—that is to say, not out of commission, but with reduced crews, and a resultant diminution in the number and importance of their various activities and maneuvers.

There is also "INACTIVE RESERVE," which applies to vessels laid up at navy yards, the crews completely removed and the machinery treated for preservation against rust and corrosion, which are bound to occur, despite all efforts at prevention.

The third is called "DE-COMMISSIONING." In this case the vessel is laid up and protected as far as may be, and all its instruments and fittings are removed.

These various methods of treating combat vessels, other than maintaining their fighting efficiency, do not take into account the disastrous results, which they involve, to the morale of the navy personnel.

The shifting of crews from ship to ship, the scattering and redistribution of men grown familiar with their duties, the loss of the sense of identification with their ship and their pride in it, are utterly destructive of that morale and friendly rivalry which is essential to the maintenance of efficiency at its maximum.

The question which will engage the attention of Congress is WHETHER THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE NAVY HAS BEEN MAINTAINED OR IMPAIRED.

The various shifts and devices which may be used to disguise or conceal the reduction of the navy's strength and efficiency will not stand against the resolve of Congress to get at the truth of the matter.

This is its plain duty to the country.

Ely Saves Holiday Cheer

Governor Halts Miserable "Economy" Plan

The order to deprive the inmates and employes of the State institutions of any kind of fowl and of the other holiday fixin's on Thanksgiving Day and Christmas "in the interest of economy" was another of those cheap performances which rile the good people of Massachusetts.

There are 25,000 inmates and 5000 employes of these State hospitals at which this picayune order was directed.

These inmates are the State's children. And they should command the tender care which a considerate mother bestows upon her children in the family home.

These employes have never been paid a wage which fully compensates the arduous service they render the State. Neither they nor the hapless inmates should be made the victims of unctuous State officials who seem to possess the savage philosophy of ancient masters of slave galleys.

Anyone who has had any experience with the monotonous menu of hospitals and State institutions knows the cheer and happiness which these holidays bring.

The attempt of the State Department of Mental Diseases to fasten this unkind order upon Governor Ely was a mischevious political trick which he has adequately exposed.

Well, the inmates and the employes ARE to have their holiday dinners, as usual.

And in the enjoyment of them they can remember, with some gratitude Captain Bernard J. Doherty, dean of the Boston American staff at the State House.

It was he who discovered this senseless, uncharitable order, which was promptly exposed through the columns of the Boston Evening American and decisively squelched by Governor Ely when it came to his attention.

League Court Injustice

In theory, the World Court of the League of Nations represents international justice. In fact, it represents the will of militaristic France.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal, a pro-League newspaper, made the foregoing discovery in its study of the League Court's decision against the Austro-German Customs Union. An editorial in the Commercial Appeal said:

"France's employment of economic pressure to gain political ends has won again. . . .

"It happens that France, which made its tacit threat some time ago, leads in the World Court decision. France leads, and with her in the decision are her satellites, the Balkan States, and naturally Italy and Spain. The decision against Austria's right to enter is clearly a gesture to justify France's position. . . .

"It begins to look as though France and her followers were definitely arrayed against the world. For, every time France wins a victory, other nations lose."

New York Day by Day

Empire Building

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—What New York was beginning to believe was its most stupendous building blunder has made the first turn with surprising form. It has been slow going on a muddy track, but to round out a badly mixed metaphor, The Empire building may flash under the wire a winner.

Like many other now successful structures, it has not escaped being known at a "folly." And it has been the target for many grisly gags in the revues. Comic songs, stressing its woe, have been sung in the vaudeville halls, and it has been pilloried in cartoons.

To the casual passerby at this writing it still presents a bleakness. Its first floor windows, save for one brilliantly lit exception, are a study in funereal black so none may see it: emptiness. Many upper floors present the dinginess of the handle factory back home.

Yet one of the concessions has proved a backbone of strength. It is already producing a million a year revenue from sightseers who, at a dollar a head, are rushed up 102 floors to gaze out upon the spreading metropolitan panorama.

Too, while other buildings in the neighborhood have been at a standstill, the Empire is gradually finding tenants. With the slightest sustained upturn in business, its promoters profess to have few worries. Many prospective tenants are merely waiting for better days.

New York has a new twist to the oldest profession. To the police they are known as "auto girls." Whereas they once walked streets, they now roam the curbs in motor cars for their pickups. A sidewalk flirtation results in an invitation to drive, a visit to an apartment and perhaps a souvenir of blackmail.

I ran afoul of one of the gay charioteers along Madison avenue the other dusk. Drawing up to the curb, a young blonde inquired invitingly: "Going anywhere?" With eyes cast demurely down and digging a toe in the pavement, I replied nowhere in particular. I'll spin you through the park," she suggested. At my embarrassed confusion, she shifted gears, called out: "All right, grandpa, toddle along" —and shot away.

* * *

Gentlemen who have "that way" with strange ladies stir my sincerest admiration. I have a friend who dons jaunts through life with gracious gallantry. On an ocean steamer one time he asked my opinion who was the most beautiful lady in the dining room. I selected a striking brunette, a ringer for Maxine Elliott, with the haughtiness of a peacock and alone at a table. I have no notion of the modus operandi, but before the Scilly Islands were sighted, they were strolling the deck hand in hand, engaged. I might add this was seven years ago and he is still unwed. Every time I see him he is in an ecstatic gurgle over some new flame.

For no reason it suddenly struck me it might be elegant fun to introduce Giulio Gatti-Casazza to Gutzon Borglum, first stuffing the mouth full of birdshot.

* * *

There are several other idiotic frenzies that assail me. Whenever I see Peggy Hoyt I want to muss her meticulously coiffed hair. Irvin Cobb inspires a letch to plait his eyebrows, Sam Hellman to push back his ears. Al Bedell to autograph his collar, and some day I feel certain I am going to forget myself and trip Charles M. Schwab coming haughtily down a theater aisle.

Just Folks

Two Viewpoints

The man of comfort shook his head.
"Had but the sinner understood
He might have saved himself," he said.
"It is so easy to be good.

"No need to steal; no need to lie;
No need an outlawed brute to be.
Why do men live with shame, when I
Have kept from it so easily?"

"Easy!" the prisoner replied;
"Think you I like this cell house barred?
Your better ways I've often tried
And failed because I found them hard.

"Some men at ease run faster than
Their slower neighbors in the race,
And never understand the man
Who fails so oft to keep the pace.

"The giant easily lifts high
Great weights before a gathered throng,
And no doubt thinks, if but they'd try
His fellow-men could be as strong."

Listen, World!

I Admire Al Capone

I ADMIRE Al Capone.

Don't snort. You admire him yourself. You know you do. Only I've the nerve to admit it—and you haven't.

I repeat—I admire Al Capone, though I despise the things he does.

But we've wished those things on ourselves. They are the direct consequence of what ails us.

What ails us is our own weakness . . . not knowing what we want.

We knew what we wanted once.

We were not a very smart people, nor a very complicated nor cultured people. But we were a healthy people, and we wanted a certain healthy thing. We wanted decency.

There were bad people among us, but we kept them in their place. If they got out of their places, we smacked them down.

We lived our way. They lived theirs. We had very simple minds. Black was black to us. And white was white. We didn't try mixing 'em. There were exceptions, of course. But most of us knew what we wanted. We wanted decency. And we saw to it that we got it.

But now we don't know what we want.

We still say we want decency—But we think, with reason, that it must have been Awful Dull to live the way grandpa did.

We like to be good . . . but we also like to be gay.

We pledge allegiance to our flag and to the country for which it stands . . . but anuzzer li'l drink won't do us any harm!

So we go on . . . wobbling, wavering . . . living on the north side of the tracks by day, on the south side by night. Bad? We're not bad. We're just muddled. We don't know what we want.

BUT AL CAPONE KNOWS WHAT HE WANTS.

Al Capone wants money. Al Capone wants power. He knows how to get money. He knows how to get power. He gets them. He doesn't go fumbling around . . . kidding himself that he is doing one thing when he is really doing another. He doesn't spend his energy an' enthusiasm on a dozen different projects. He is direct. He is sure. He wants what he wants and he fights for it. And if you get in his way, that's just your bad luck.

I admire Al Capone. They say he is Public Enemy Number One. But he isn't.

PUBLIC ENEMY NUMBER ONE IS OUR OWN WEAKNESS, OUR INDECISION AND VACILLATION, OUR HYPOCRISY.

Al Capone is a bad man, but he is a strong man. He is the most significant figure in America today. He is actually more like the old-fashioned fighting Americans than any other person on our stage. He has their directness, their stubbornness, their courage, their simple, uncomplicated viewpoint, their unsentimental downrightness, their wallop. He aims different—that's all.

But at least he has an aim.

And that's more than you can say of most of our cockeyed patriots.

Sales Tax Meets Need for Larger Federal Revenue

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

With Administration leaders now conceding that tax increases are inevitable, it becomes the task of Congress to select imposts which will prove least burdensome.

Important Treasury officials think that the SALES TAX offers the BEST solution to the tangled situation, but they are dubious about the political feasibility of getting Congress to adopt a selected sales tax.

Believing that our lawmakers want actual data to guide them, William Randolph Hearst is acting as host to a delegation of sixty Representatives and Senators, who are now observing how the sales tax principle actually works in Canada.

Unlike the existing Federal taxes on profits, which are highly variable and which in some industries reach the vanishing point in periods of depression, the sales tax is based on the relatively constant factor of total business transactions.

Unlike the corporation and personal income taxes, which especially penalize the efficient producer and distributor, the sales tax is levied EQUALLY on all factors in dynamic business.

Comparatively easy of collection and relatively painless, the selected sales tax, which exempts necessities, has the immense merit of being a revenue-producing tax at all stages of the business cycle.

On the other hand, rash proposals for substantially increasing the rates on existing income and corporation schedules overlook the extent to which incomes have diminished during the depression, and ignore the fact that a punitive rate tends to drive capital into tax-exempt channels. Accordingly, such suggestions involve hypothetical increases in hypothetical incomes, whereas the selected sales tax would be predicated on real transactions and could not be evaded.

The Canadian sales tax is collected from the manufacturer or wholesaler at the first sale of the completed article. The French sales tax is a broader turnover tax and is levied not only on sales, but on commissions, fees, interest, and many other commercial payments. In adopting the sales tax a decade ago the Dominion of Canada patterned its program very closely after the Philippines' sales tax setup, which had then been in SUCCESSFUL OPERATION FOR SIXTEEN YEARS.

In connection with the present visit of American legislators in Canada, J. V. E. Porteus, official in a large mercantile organization in Montreal, pointed out:

"The sales tax is all right. I don't mind the sales tax as a revenue producer. The consumer hardly ever sees the sales tax. It is one of the most 'painless' forms of taxation from the public standpoint I know about."

Another Montreal merchant, J. E. Dodds, said:

"I believe the sales tax system has worked well in Canada. There have been difficulties in administering it, but these are being overcome."

Unlike some Administration leaders, who think that the sales tax, though desirable, is politically unattainable, the Hearst newspapers believe that members of Congress will act favorably, if the genuine merits of the sales tax principle are effectively presented to them.

The successful experience of Canada, France and the Philippines with the sales tax should count infinitely more with our national lawmakers than mere abstract academic discussion.

Stealing Our Independence

Civic Rebellion Bound to Come

We wonder how long the people of New England, so much respected for their political independence, are going to stand for this steady encroaching upon their civic rights without rebelling.

What a spectacle Samuel Adams would see in Boston if the old patriot should return!

A traffic light can't be erected in the great metropolis, it seems, without traipsing to the State House to secure the solemn approval of some statesman whose broad knowledge of metropolitan life was gained on the pathways of Enfield or Sagadahoc.

When a city like Boston or Lowell or Lawrence threatens to go Democratic, it is promptly converted into a "non-partisan" community by the Republican Legislature.

And its intimate rights are promptly put under the espionage of some new State commission, as if its citizens were a gang of Bagdad thieves.

Nor can it be assumed that the Democrats would not strive for this undemocratic partisan advantage if they were given complete control.

These encroachments are not isolated to Massachusetts. They are typical of the expansion of bureaucracy. Manchester, N. H., the northernmost metropolis, a respectable community of 75,000 people, have been compelled by the Legislature to surrender control of its police department and many of its financial rights. A commission appointed from Concord takes charge here and there, and about the only privilege left to the local citizens is to pay the bills for it all.

The John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company has published a short life-story of Samuel Adams, in which it says:

"The voters, furthermore, gave their delegates the most explicit instructions as to how they should act on each measure that came up in the Assembly. Clearly such a system made for the greatest possible expression of the desires of the people.

"Adams found a colony that was not entirely governed by the people but a town system that was completely democratic, and it was through the town system that he worked."

These States officials should read this story and learn that we are better off when we get back to the self-government which Adams knew to be so valuable and reliable.

Perils of Wage Cutting

President George W. Coleman of the Babson Institute was asked in Chipman Hall, where he addressed the Baptist clergymen:

"Do you believe in cutting wages?"

To which he replied:

"Of course not. As if any workingman had enough! It is the workers and the middle classes who are squeezed by wage cuts.
